Kentucky Afired

By John Wilson

Smart merchandisers stock their shelves with spring goods right after Christmas, knowing they're already tired of winter and are ready for warm weather.

That "psychological spring" precedes the actual event by several months doesn't mean it's false. It seems like the urge to get on the water is just about the time the weather is turning really nasty and we anglers spend most of January and February pacing the floor, hating for warm weather.

Although some brave do venture to fish year-round, there are days when even the hardiest among us are forced to stay indoors, where weekend fishing programs on TV only serve to further whet the appetite and increase the speed and frequency of our floor pacing.

You can always reorganize your tackle box, sharpen all your hooks, put new line on your reels and go through all those well-thumbed fishing catalogs one more time. But these activities are seldom enough to fill all the long, cold, windy days of the winter.

During the last couple of years, I've turned to making some of my own lures and have found it an interesting and worthwhile way to pass the time. Not only does it give me something to do, but it also saves money over buying the same baits ready made.

A hard-core lure maker will start with a piece of cedar or balsa and an assortment of whittling knives and end up with an almost perfect replica of the hottest new bass bait on the market. But this isn't the kind of lure making I'm talking about. For one thing, folks like me usually don't get along well like with sharp implements and the only recognizable thing we can create by whittling is a pile of shavings.

But there are several kinds of lures you can make with only a minimum of skill and dexterity — the molded baits. These fall into basically two classes — the soft plastic lure and lead-headed jigs. Both are made by pouring hot material into a mold and allowing it to cool, so skill and dexterity come into play only when it's necessary to get out of the way of spilled hot liquid.

Molds for plastic baits are available at larger tackle stores, along with the plastic material and coloring agents. Some people like to make their own molds, either out of plaster or paris or

Two parks reduce rates

After a full day of being out in the snow, nothing is more relaxing than drinking a cup of hot cider or munching on some popcorn in front of a blazing fire. Pennington Forest and Buckhorn Lake state resort parks extend an offer to enjoy such relaxation at an affordable price.

In celebration of remaining open for their first winter season, both parks have reduced winter rates and increased winter fun. Two people can stay for the price of one in the rustic lodges of Pennington Forest, in Western Kentucky, and Buckhorn located in the southeastern part of the state through March 15.

Aside from reduced room rates, the parks are selling gift shop items at a 20 percent discount and offering complimentary continental breakfasts to registered guests.

As long as the snow is on the ground both parks will have designated sledding areas for those who bring their sleds to try out the parks' trails. Both parks have well-developed trails for winter hiking. The lodge fireplaces will be a popular spot after enjoying the park's winter activities.

Each park also features special weekend activities geared to the winter months. Berea College in program

Berea College, known nationally for its student labor program and craft industries, is Kentucky's newest participant in the national Elderhostel program.

Beginning next summer, senior citizens will be on Berea's campus for planned academic, social and recreational activities. Forty retired persons from the British Isles will arrive July 12 for a week-long stay under the sponsorship of SACA, the British counterpart of Elderhostel. Members of this group will be enrolled in two courses, "Birds of the Kentucky Summer" and "In Space and Time," an introduction to astronomy.

A group of American retirees will be on the campus the week of July 19 studying "Appalachian Literature," "Genealogical Research" and "Birds of the Kentucky Summer."

Both groups will have an opportunity to work with Berea physical education instructor Dorothy Christian in "Body Recall," a fitness program she designed for senior citizens. Elderhostel is designed specifically for students over 60 years of age to study on college and university campuses. Programs offer a balanced mix of academic and recreational opportunities under the leadership of college faculty and personnel. Participants may travel from campus to campus during the summer in this national program offered by a network of more than 250 colleges and universities throughout the United States.

The cost for the 1981 summer program is $10 per week which includes dormitory room, cafeteria meals and fees. Some computer spaces are available and a limited number of scholarships will be provided for Kentucky residents.

Additional information on Berea's program may be obtained from Donna Farr, CPO 2208, Berea College, Berea, Ky. 40408 (502-964-9441, ext. 251). Registration for all programs must be made through Elderhostel, Inc., 100 Boylston Street, Suite 200, Boston, Mass. 02116. Dr. Alice Brown, Eastern Kentucky University, Richmond, Ky. 40475 (606-622-1444) is coordinator of programs in Kentucky.
