

Governmental deadwood

Out in Arizona, the land of sunshine, state officials have a hard time getting waste in government. They get rid of the deadwood.

This is done with a sort of "firing" squad, headed by a two-man team which accuses the state for layoff or burning state employees. When found, the offenders are fired, demoted or suspended.

Mobilizing Reaganomics

The energy deregulation script, which was written by both the Carter and the Reagan administrations, called for U.S. oil gains, once unleashed to explore, drill and produce more energy. But Mobil Oil and other large firms given tax breaks under Reaganomics are following their own different scenarios.

Opinion

Their system appears to be effective. About 1,000 of Arizona's 15,000 state employees fell victim to the Rogers-Price axe last year alone. Maybe some other states — and the federal government — could profit by using this kind of purge.

We might even think of a county or two that could use a little visit from Mr. Rogers and Mr. Price.

Agree or not

Something has to give in state financial picture. Montgomery Ward, for example, which Mobil took over several years ago during an energy crunch, has favored so badly in corporate bondage that it has become a drag even in its mammoth owner.

No cigar for Castro

Fidel Castro's Cuba, wrecking havoc from Latin America to Southern Africa like a giant whirlwind octopus gone wild out of control, might just find its long arms caught in a meat grinder soon.

Down Memory Lane

Whatever comes next will need to be stronger — the kind of medicine the Castro regime will find hard to swallow.

Many hospitals are being built and wings put onto existing ones all over the country despite overabundance of beds.

It is hard to believe hospitals are having financial troubles. If you have been a patient of one of these, your grandchild or your 4-year-old nephew in a hospital is the charge of a nurse at a good hotel.

A strange Autumn, of fields blanketed with snow, white red and gold flame in field and woodland. Here and there the leaves on tenuous and yesterday I saw the sun transform two yellow maples into veritable flowers...
