County fire destroys barn

A fire that broke out around 9 p.m. last Tuesday night completely destroyed a barn and its contents on the Moorefield Road eight miles from Carlisle, according to a report from County Fire Chief Woody Wilson.

Wilson said that the barn was filled with hay and that an unidentified neighbor heard an explosion and then looked out to see the building engulfed in flames.

Local fire fighters were able to contain the blaze with little difficulty, and no injuries were reported in relation to the incident. No cause for the fire has yet been determined.
