Just Dots

With a map of Nicholas County and a pencil, the Mercury could fill it with tiny marks. They'd be

Just Dots . . .

But each of them would represent a home into which The Mercury goes on a week-end holiday each week. Many of them would be homes into which it has gone since its beginning in 1867.

Just Dots . . .

But their number has increased steadily from year to year. After this many, spread with carelessness, does the newspaper's influence outlast to spread.

Just Dots . . .

But each of them stands for a family to whom some advertiser wishes to talk. Through The Mercury he can do it more ECONOMICALLY THAN THROUGH ANY OTHER MEDIUM. All he pays is the cost of the space he uses. No mailing, no postage, no making list, no extra printing costs. And his message, surrounded by five star matter, will be READ AND RE-READ.

Just Dots . . .

But The Mercury reaches each of them MORE EFFECTIVELY, CONVENIENTLY, AND AT LESS COST THAN ANY OTHER CHANNEL. This newspaper, through its dots, goes the hands of buyer and seller. Let's talk it over. Mr. Advertiser: The Mercury is yours to serve. So serve its readers and make you money.

Random thoughts of a country editor...

Only yesterday I saw the downy woodpecker go past in his up and down flight; and perhaps a bit of doggerel verse that answers all these wild warnings most aptly, though it was intended to answer those who, falling into the serene and yellow leaf, indulge a subconscious jealousy of the vivid freshness of youth by bemoaning the rapidity with which the present generation is going to the demolition bowyer's work.

"My grandd, viewing earth's worn cogs,
Said things were going to the dogs.
His grandd, in his old skin togs,
Said things were going to the dogs.
His grandd in the Flemish boogs,
Said things were going to the dogs.
There's one thing that I have to state:
The dogs have had a good long wait,
And so they have and so they will, if they wait until these United States go to the dogs, or "grass grows in the streets of our cities," or until any of the untoward predictions of this political campaign are realized. And so a plague on politics for this week and let us harken ourselves for the winter. In which there may be suffering, but not more than has to be endured, if the more fortunate man help his unfortunate brother. And just around the corner — and this is one corner we may depend upon — there will come another spring.

So seeking to cheer myself this dismal day, with thoughts that the strain and hysteria of another campaign is past, I potter about at this, that and 't'other, checking my poor accounts with groanings at the result of my figures, so lean has grown the business of country newspaper editing these days, and dreading to open letters, lest I find another dan. And I hope that the dust I send out may not so bedevil the poor wretches who receive them, as those that I receive harass me; and I think they must not, for they make no outcry, nor do they reply.

Presently up into the town, where the streets are deserted and Pulling the barber, plays his fiddle dolefully behind closed blinds. And I would that I fiddled, for Fulton tells me he can saw upon his violin and shed tears like a cost. Blessed be the man who can play with a hobby, especially on a soggy Sunday, when the skies weep and the air is fog-like and oppressive. I must get me back to my bird hobby and, as soon as the election is over, I mean to have a post set for a suet lump and winter feeding station near my kitchen window.
