Classroom on wheels at Morehead University

Traveling the gently rolling land of Kentucky's Bluegrass region, a blue and white bus with "Morehead State University" painted on its sides hauls along U.S. 60 between stone fences built by slaves more than a hundred years ago.

The bus's interior is the classroom for MSU's "Kentucky Historical Years" class. At each stop, the classroom expands to include the buildings, battlefields, facts and legends which make up the history of the state.

The class begins at 8 a.m. five Saturdays each semester at sleepy students, carrying camera and notepad, board the bus on the MSU campus and slide down in the comfortable seats, ready for a journey into history.

During a recent trip, 45 students toured Shakerstown, a village built in the early 1800's by a group of religious zealots; Fort Harrod, one of the oldest settlements of white men east of the Allegheny Mountains; Perryville, site of "the bloodiest day" in Kentucky's history; where more than 6,000 Civil War casualties occurred in a single day; and Danville, Kentucky's birthplace, where the first state constitution was signed in 1792.

KET profiles Keenland sales and Tom Gentry

Two years ago, at a thoroughbred auction in Lexington, horse breeder Tom Gentry made history by selling a yearling for $1.4 million. With sales of such proportion, Gentry is helping to turn the business of horse sales into one of the most promising international markets in the world today.

"Enterprise," the new documentary series on how business works, tracks the unpredictable world of thoroughbred sales in "Fast Horse In A Bull Market," premiering tonight, Oct. 29 at 8 p.m.

Hosted by Eric Sevareid, "Fast Horse In A Bull Market" is a co-production of WGBH, Boston, which produces the series, and KET, which taped the 30-minute documentary.

"Enterprise" is a 13-part series that examines the single institution that most shapes the American way of life-business. The programs follow business people in a variety of situations as they make key decisions regarding their companies.

Symphony's 100th birthday concert premiers on KET

The climax of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 100th birthday takes place with a gala concert in Boston's historic Symphony Hall. The two-hour concert airs on KET Wednesday, Nov. 4 at 9 p.m.

At the high point of nearly two years of special events leading up to the orchestra's centennial, the concert features the Boston Symphony and Music Director Seiji Ozawa, joined by 10 internationally renowned artists: Itzhak Perlman, Leonie Price, Marilyn Horowitz, and Isaac Stern.

Other highlights include a violin concerto by Perlman and Sarah, Hayden's Oello Concerto in C Major by Rostropovich, and Verdi's aria from "Il Trovatore," sung by Price.

Minor accident on West Main

According to an accident report on file in the Sheriff's office by Constable Ronald J. Donald, a non-injury two vehicle collision took place at the intersection of Ky. 22 West Main Street Monday evening at 8:48 p.m. Involved in the accident were Earl Delaney, Route 3, Carlisle, and Max Kennedy, also of Route 3.

The report said that Kennedy was reportedly pulling from Ky. 22 onto West Main when he saw an oncoming car and came to a stop. At that moment Delaney's car rammed into the right rear portion of his vehicle.

Both cars received only minor damage, and no one was injured.

Beshear's office files complaint

Attorney General Steve Beshear has announced that his office filed a complaint and requested injunctive relief in Franklin Circuit Court Oct. 19 concerning an order of the Public Service Commission issued Sept. 28. In its order, the PSC granted Kentucky Power Co. the authority to purchase a 15 percent interest in a power plant being built in Indiana.

"Our suit contends that the granting of the certificate allowing purchase of the 15 percent interest is unlawful in that the evidence presented to the commission is totally lacking as to alleged benefits which would accrue to the Kentucky ratepayer," said Beshear.

Also of concern to the attorney general is the fact that Indiana does not require certificates of convenience and necessity regarding power plant construction, while Kentucky statutes require regulatory permission before construction may begin.

"We feel the PSC, which has publicly indicated its concern regarding unnecessary construction expenditures, has not followed its own lead in this particular case and has failed to sufficiently scrutinize Kentucky Power's application," said Beshear.

The Energy Regulatory Commission, statutory predecessor of the Public Service Commission, relied on previous occasions to grant the request certificate. The attorney general feels an exception has been granted in the current case which would materially change circumstances and make necessary this alteration of regulatory policy on this issue.

"The Public Service Commission has failed to quantify alleged benefits to the Kentucky consumer in its order and has failed to find that the construction is in the public interest. For these reasons, we are seeking relief from the order issued by the PSC," Beshear said.

Lt. Gov. Martha Collins announced her opposition to the succession amendment Monday, which would allow statewide state officials to succeed themselves for another four-year term.

At a news conference held in her office, Lt. Gov. Collins said, "The basic question is, do the benefits derived from allowing a Governor to pursue a second term offset the disruption of the balance of power between the executive and legislative branches of government?"

"She stated that without parity between the two branches, the Office of Governor is 'open to abuse'."

Lt. Gov. Collins also said that she had not intended to publicly announce her position on this issue, but felt that recent circumstances compelled her. "It has become my responsibility to speak out because the people of Kentucky are not being given the facts of this issue in a clear and concise manner."

She said, "Last week, some supporters of this amendment chose to place their faith in an advertising firm rather than in the people of Kentucky." She further said that the television ads were not meant to educate, but to confuse and mislead.

Lt. Gov. Collins emphasized, "When the people of Kentucky are presented with all the facts, both pro and con, they are capable of making good, sound decisions."

Kentucky food price drop biggest in 28 months

Retail food prices in Kentucky dropped 1.4 percent during the past 30 days, according to Kentucky Farm Bureau's October marketbasket survey.

The decline meant that a selected group of 40 food items cost an average $58.11 this month, down 83 cents from the September tally of $58.94. It was the largest one-month drop in food prices recorded during the 28 months that the survey has been conducted.

Falling meat prices led the downward trend, according to Ruth Huggins, survey coordinator for Farm Bureau. Only 2 of 13 meat items, including beef, pork and chicken, moved higher in price. The remaining 11 were unchanged or lower.

Other decliners included eggs, milk and two corn-based items, corn meal and corn. Bucking the trend were pork sausage, ice cream, cheese, tomatoes, flour and pickles, all of which showed price gains. Overall, 20 items declined in price during the month, 13 were higher and five remained the same.

Huggins credited falling livestock prices for much of the most price decline at the retail level. The most noticeable exception to the trend, pork sausage, is staying above other pork cuts partly as a result of its increased usage by fast-food restaurants in their new breakfast menus, she said.

Scottville had the lowest local marketbasket cost while Jackson was highest. Volunteer price checkers were active this month in 25 Kentucky communities.

These local figures are Scottville, $5.30; Greensburg, $4.48; Owensboro, $5.27; Shelbyville, $5.31; Hopkinsville, $6.10; Salyersville, $6.40; Morehead, $6.48; Corythian, $6.61; Glasgow, $6.70; Murfreesville, $6.73; Elizabethtown, $6.76; Covington, $7.07; Lexington, $7.77.

Brandenburg, $7.90; London, $8.34; Greenup, $8.46; Georgetown, $9.01; Sebree, $9.19; Louisville, $9.41; Stanford, $9.98; Frankfort, $9.40; Murray, $9.89; Henderson, $11.88; Lone Oak, $2.98; and Jackson, $4.11.

On the other end of the food supply chain, farmers suffered price setbacks virtually across the board during USDA's most recent reporting period. Corn, soybean, cattle and hog prices all dropped, according to the Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. Overall, farm prices were down 2.2 percent, and were 5.6 percent lower than this time last year. The index of farm costs was unchanged from last month, and stayed 7.1 percent above year-ago levels.

Unemployment rate drops
Kentucky's unemployment rate dropped from 7.1 percent in August to 6.9 percent in September, Department for Human Resources officials said. The rate for September a year ago was 8.3 percent.

"This was the eighth successive month in which the rate has declined and the first time in the last 21 months that the unemployment rate has been below seven percent," said Dr. Grady Stumbo, secretary of the Department for Human Resources.

The number of persons unemployed has dropped from 118,000 in August to 108,600 in September.

The comparable national unemployment rate for September was 7.3 percent.

VOTE Bill Power For Mayor

"I have had plenty of experience with all phases of city government. I am giving full time to the city work with exception of one day I donate to your local cemetery in paying wages and keeping books up to date.

Since working closely at City Hall we are now out of debt, have money invested drawing interest and are progressing nicely. Give me your vote and a good council and we will continue to improve our city.
