(C) 1982 Kentucky Business Ledger
Recent projections by the Public Service Commission indicated that power generation throughout the Commonwealth will increase by 15 percent in 1982.

In a rough statement delivered by commission chairman Martin Vohs and signed by commissioners Katherine Randall and Dennis P. Carrigan, the regulatory body told Kentucky utilities in "10 ways to cut costs, defer requests for higher rates and slow the rate increase in utility bills."

The statement also includes recommendations that will save the working force in Kentucky, with labor unions being asked for give-backs, with federal assistance programs being reduced and with many programs still struggling with the payment of record heating bills, this is no time for conducting utility business as usual.

The appeal for restraint was the latest in a series of strong messages to Kentucky utilities from the three commissioners, who look office in March 1981.

When the Commission advised General Telephone Co. of Kentucky to reduce the $22 million rate increase requested last year, it also told the firm to be closer attention to good management practices.

In the rate utilities in general were advised to do a better job of controlling costs rather than coming to the commission for higher rates every year, even more often.

In granting Lexington-based Kenucky Utilities a $28.2 million annual rate increase, about 70 percent of the $23.2 million requested, the commission sharply questioned the company's program to build new generating facilities.

In other major rate decisions last year, the commission, in most cases, greatly reduced the amount of rate increases by the utility. For example, it granted South Central Bell only $39 million of the $100 million the company had requested for higher rates, or 38.2 percent.

The commission also approved a rate increase of $1.1 million for the Commonwealth Telephone Co. of Kentucky, 27.5 percent of the $4 million requested. $10.8 million for General Telephone, 47 percent of the requested $23 million; and $8.2 million for Western Kentucky Gas, 78.1 percent of the requested $10.6 million.

To its rate decisions affecting increased electric utilities, the commission has a 19-year record of granting 44.3 percent of the revenue increase requested.

On June 30, 1981, the panel granted rate increases totaling $25 million after receiving requests for $40.1 million in additional revenue from the state's four publicly-held electric companies: Louisville Gas and Electric, Kentucky Utilities, Kentucky Power Corp., and Light, Heat and Power.

In the rate utilities in general were advised to do a better job of controlling costs rather than coming to the commission for higher rates every year, even more often.

New business in town
The West End Market on Ky. 26 at the west end of Carlisle opened for business this week, and promptly displayed low gas prices, which brought lots of cars. Freda and Charles Allan Sparks are the owners of the combination self-service gasoline and fast food market. Soon after the Sparks displayed their regular gas price.

ASCs note

The local ASCS Office has received all but one 1981 barley tobacco marketing contract. An estimated 5,300,000 pounds of tobacco was sold at an effective quote of 7,040,400 pounds (100 percent). This indicates that the county was approximately 33 percent short for the 1981. This year's ticket also includes eight coupons from merchants worth $10 in value.

The 1982 county effective quote will be approximately 4,600,000 pounds. This figure includes the 1981 shortage and the three percent national increase.
