The candidates: Hopkins reports on the new burley bill and Mills attacks the 'rich man's congressman.'

Hopkins
The new tobacco bill is now being considered by the Senate after having passed by the house on a voice vote. Rep. Larry Hopkins of the Sixth District told the Mercury during a visit to Carlisle last week.

"We got the bill passed on the floor of the house with three amendments that I added," Hopkins said, "although the Senate may change the bill."

Hopkins, however, said he would be a member of any Senate-house conference committee that would settle on the bill.

"We had a real problem with getting this bill through," Hopkins said, "because we were very close to losing jurisdiction over the bill if we had made it mandatory for farmers to join the cooperative association and contribute one or two cents a pound toward the costs of selling."

"The problem was that the IRS was going to make the money taxable for the farmer. And if the IRS did that, jurisdiction over the burley program would have gone to the House Ways and Means Committee where tobacco has no friends at all."

Hopkins said changes had to be made so that the bill could stay in the agriculture committee where several tobacco bill congressmen are members.

"So instead of making it mandatory for the farmer to pay a fee to market his tobacco, we have made it voluntary," Hopkins said. "That removes the IRS taxing authority from the bill."

"In return for this so-called voluntary privilege, the farmer will get price supports for his crop. That was how we worked it out."

Hopkins said the 1961 Farm Bill mandated that the tobacco program operate at no net cost to the taxpayer.

"Even though one or two cents a pound is going to cost the farmer, it's better than the free market which has the large pool problem. They're going to have to pay 44 cents a pound. And we're keeping our program, which is most important."

Hopkins said that his three amendments were (1) to raise leasing allowances from 10,000 to 30,000, (2) to take large corporations out of the business, (3) to operate at no net cost to the taxpayer.

Hopkins also said the opportunity of an interview in the Mercury office to ask voters to vote for him in November. "I ask for your vote, because I am a ranking member of the House Agriculture Committee and that means we have someone in kind of attack on the burley program where it counts," Hopkins said.

Gas pipe

Lecher stated that this would cause the workload on Shively by cutting down on the overtime he is now having to do. A motion in favor of this suggestion passed on a roll call vote.

Several bills were read and voted on by the Chemical Company of M.L. Shively retained their service of selling equipment to the city for use at the sewer plant, at a gallon in 10-gallon drums. This bid was to come lower on the gallon than the city is presently paying.

Only one bid was received on painting part of the water tank at the river. It was from Steve Jolly for $1750 which included scraping, priming, painting and labor. Council rejected this bid, and will re-advertise.

One bid was received on a 1960 Gremlin lawn mower from Elaine Sloan for $100. Bid accepted.

One bid on a 1971 dump truck from Brooks Hunsell for $1238. Bid rejected. The truck could possibly be used to haul sewage from sewer plant to dumping at a designated state approved site.

No bid was received on the old police cruiser. Junior Isham was present and expressed an interest in purchasing the cruiser if council would set a price. Dickson Ward will check into the legality of how to sell an item after a bid has been let with no response.

Other business discussed by council — Isaac Sorrell, representing the Grand Kaitling, asked how much B.C. Kaitling would be charged if he should decide to handle their own trash and pick up. They presently pay $150 per month for a five-day a week pick up by the city. Sorrell was asked to appear again at the August meeting at which time council hoped to arrive at a decision.

William Hlander appeared before council to request a letter which had been sent to him stating the unsightly and unsafe condition of the old Carlisle High School building which he is in the process of tearing down.

Also the water run-off into the street has presented a problem. Hlander stated that demolition work was progressing rapidly as possible but was proving to be slow and costly, and that it might be wiser before the building was completely down. Councilman Vaughn asked him if a barricade could be put up on the front door. Hlander agreed to this.

City Clerk Mary Tapp was given to go-back on attending a University of Kentucky sponsored school for the week of the last July at a cost of $175. Councilman Clark reported that Dr. Orlan Villaver has requested a free parking space in front of his new office on South Broadway. Request granted.

Roger Kater of OVC asked that the arbitration board meet and report its decision to him by July 19. The board will meet Sunday night, July 19.

City Superintendent Vandenberg, has reported that patch work blanketing will be done on the streets throughout the city, such as North Street, Doreyville, Catherine Street, School Avenue, and near Shively's Greenhouses.

Council agreed to pay $15 to each of the extra man Charles Orsini hired to assist him crew clean up the streets after the Blackberry Festival.

After Councilman Vaughn's chair literally fell apart while he was sitting, Frank, the auditor firm which has conducted the city's audit for several years, requested that Carlisle adopt a June 30 year end for fiscal reporting. The city's present year is Dec. 31. This would mean that the firm would not conduct the city's 1962 audit until June 30, 1962, covering 18 months instead of 12. The same fee (not to exceed $10,000) would be charged as was charged for the 1961 12-month audit.

It was reported that $11,238.40 has been awarded Carlisle by Municipal Road Fund. This was cut about $1,000 from the amount received by Carlisle. City Clerk Tapp reported that amount Carlisle received from the coal severance tax will be cut by $1,100 next year. A public hearing was set for Aug. 21 at 7 p.m. for discussion of the dispersal of the fund money.

Mayor Hatcher suggested having a bath fry for city employees and householders on Aug. 21 or 28 at the city lake. All members agreed.

How to handle obscene phone calls

South Central Bell customers who are repeatedly bothered by obscene or threatening phone calls may be able to determine where the calls are being made, thanks to advanced tracing techniques used by the phone company. Local Bell district manager Carl Jones said the methods developed for tracing calls are used mainly when obscene or threatening calls are frequently repeated. "There is no limitation in our conventional tracing," he said, "but the number the call was made from can be determined."

He added that, in many cases, the company can find the number even if the caller hangs up, through devices that hold the connection.

Jones said that anytime a harassing call is made, some basic tips should be followed:

— If the caller does not identify himself, hang up.

— If the caller makes obscene, suggestive or threatening remarks, hang up.

— If there is no voice on the line, hang up.

"The kind of person who makes these calls wants a reaction. When you hang up, you take away the main thing to want — an audience — and in most cases, the calls will stop coming," Jones said.

Birth certificates now available

Sally S. Watkins, Circuit Clerk, announced that applications for birth certificates are now available in her office in the courthouse.

assigned this month a low income housing project. I want to point out that a new flat apartment will rent for $100 a month, and I don't call that low income."

Burke also said that a three man active economic development committee was being formed to push for more jobs in Carlisle and those names would be announced at a later date.

The chamber also contributed a portion of the cost of a full page advertisement in this week's Mercury, thereby substantially reducing the cost to the individual businesses. The advertisement welcomes the two new doctors to the community.
