Opinion

Nixon immunity decision was right

The surprising aspect of the U.S. Supreme Court decision that granted immunity to former President Nixon for actions taken while in office was the narrowness of the 5-4 majority.

We are convinced the court majority reached the correct decision. As Justice Lewis Powell in the prevailing view explicated, "immunity" is rooted in the constitutional tradition of the separation of powers and supported by our history.

In his vigorous dissent, Justice Byron White curiously ignored the tenor courts of late that we had begun to fear those characteristics were prerequisites for championship tennis.

Modesty

person achieves something, he doesn't go around saying, "I did this" or "I did that." Here, business-wise, you promote everything. I can win a thousand millions in a row, and you won't hear me get up and say I'm the No. 1.

We suspect that what Llewelly said is true. Tennis used to be a gentleman's game. What is said is not just that the game has changed with so much money and fame of the Kentucky character. Such things as gentleness and graciousness.
