

Bath, Montgomery get Chenault land

Agriculture students in the counties of Bath and Montgomery are getting an opportunity they would not have had otherwise were it not for the generosity of the late C.C. Chenault, Jr., a Kentucky farmer.

Chenault, a farmer who held a lot of land overlooking the county line between Bath and Montgomery counties, more than $1 million dollars worth of it, is a self-perpetuating fund and school systems. After Chenault died in 1971, the money he left to the school systems was set up in trust to be used for teaching the art and science of agriculture. Montgomery built an agriculture center in 1978 and Bath County opened its new facility this year.

The school system used the interest earned from the trust, rather than the principal, to fund the center. The Bath and Montgomery County school systems, after Chenault died in 1971, the money he left to the school systems was set up in trust to be used for teaching the art and science of agriculture. Montgomery built an agriculture center in 1978 and Bath County opened its new facility this year.

Three day event for fire fighters

Tracy Farmer, secretary of the state Cabinet for Public Protection and Regulation, describes the Kentucky Fire School as "one of the most valuable and visible programs in the state."

The year is headed by State Fire Marshal Gayle Horn. "Selling art what county when you're talking about training and the results from the training are saved. You can't ask for more of a fire school," he said.

Here's a agency, which is in the Public Protection Cabinet's Department of Housing, Buildings and Construction, is one of the sponsors of the school. The University of Kentucky's University Extension, Lexington/Fayette Urban County Government's Division of Fire, the Kentucky Firefighters Association, and the state Department of Education's Division of Vocational Education join with the State Fire Marshal's Office annually to present the school.

The school, to be held June 7-9 on the UK campus, marks the 30th training session.

The first Kentucky Fire School, which was also the first state fire school in the nation, was held at the University of Kentucky in 1952. Approximately 200 participants enrolled in the first school, recognized as one of the best in the nation, has attracted over 1,400 participants from across the state. And, Secretary Farmer will help kick off the three-day, hands-on fire safety training event.

One of the reasons for that recognition is the training provided on hazardous materials.

Each county formed advisory committees to help the school boards determine how the money could best be used. In each case, they applied most of the money toward building new agriculture facilities.

"Sometimes we build for the present, but these school systems were thinking in terms of the future in planning these facilities," said Robert Kelly, state director for agriculture in the division of vocational education in the state Bureau of Vocational Education.

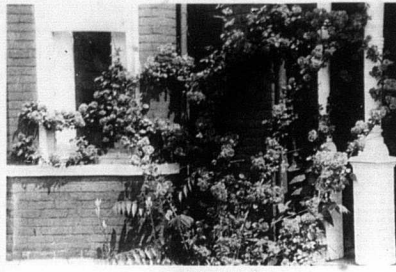

Montgomery County planners visited various schools and agricultural centers in Indiana to plan their facility to be built by the late C.C. Chenault Jr. Agriculture Center in Mt. Sterling is located on the Montgomery County High School campus. It contains home economics and distributive education programs as well as agriculture programs. The agriculture program includes horticulture, livestock, production, farm management and crop production. Vocational classes for practicing farmers are also offered.

The C.C. Chenault Jr. Agriculture Center first purchased through the trust fund and is adjacent to the elementary school. Plans are to build a high school on the same site.

The Bath County program includes horticulture, agricultural production and agricultural mechanics. The new facility has a glass greenhouse with environmental control.

The center in Bath County is noted for its library and resource. Teachers plan extensive use of competency-based, vocational education using modules. They also hope to include 1,400 books for the library and are taking donations.

Bath County agriculture teacher William Shadle calls the new facility a "dream come true." He feels it is an important addition to a community which is "agricultural in every way."

Three Nicholas Colonels

Three Nicholas Colonels have been commissioned as Kentucky Colonels by Governor John T. Brown Jr. They are Oscar Hunt Zornes and Busby Worke, both of Shoney Creek Road, and the Rev. David C. Stancil of Bryans Hill. Mr. Zornes was commissioned a Colonel for "outstanding devotion and leadership ability" as President of the Ladies Auxiliary in Carlisle.

Rev. David C. Stancil, pastor of the First Baptist Church, was commissioned for aiding the Great Kentucky Blood Drive and their blood drive in Nicholas County.

English performs at Paris

Legs English, one of the country's finest folk artists and a resident of Bourbon County, will present a concert on June 4 at the Shoney Creek Country Club at 5 p.m. The concert is sponsored by the First Arts Club and is open to the public.

A graduate of Georgetown College and Yale University in speech and theater, English has appeared in numerous venues around the United States, including Carnegie Hall, Town Hall in New York City and in universities from coast to coast.

According to Madelyn Laugren, president of the First Arts Club, English "has established an enviable reputation as balladeer, poet, arranger, composer, director and actor."

A reception and dinner will be held following the concert for Paris Arts Club members and their guests. The cost for the dinner is $20 and reservations must be made by June 4.

UK tuition goes up

Undergraduate students at the University of Kentucky will pay tuition and fees of $2,100 for the 1982-83 school year. The UK Board of Trustees in action last week confirmed the raise in tuition rates set by the state Council on Higher Education. The student activity fees will remain at last year's rate—$125—plus what is included in the per-semester tuition of $45.

The dollar of the student activity fee is dedicated for Student Association work in expanding the association's services to the campus.

Tuition and fees for undergraduate students at UK for the school year about to close were $275.

By state law, the Council on Higher Education sets tuition fees for the state university. The new tuition rates were designed to bring UK's fees closer to the benchmark institutions—those schools outside the state similar to UK in size and scope.

Tuition and fees for undergraduate students from outside the state were raised from $1,939 per semester this year to $1,235 per semester effective next fall.

Senator fees for graduate students will be $464 compared to $468 for the current school year. Nonresident graduate students will pay $1,307. Nonresidents this year paid $1,266. Increased tuition rates were also confirmed for law, pharmacy, medical and dental students.

Report potholes to local garage

Transportation Secretary Frank Mats in asking Kentucky motorists to be his "eyes and ears" in assisting city maintenance crews in battling against road problems.

Mats said his request for help is part of a "spring offensive" to tackle the damage to state-maintained roads caused by a combination of winter weather and heavy traffic.

"The state is responsible for 25,000 miles of roads and we can't be everywhere," he says. "We want the highways daily know what conditions they are in, and we want them to tell us when they notice a problem," he said.

Citizens in Nicholas County should contact Chuck Whitaker at the maintenance garage in Carlisle. The telephone number is 906-20-5310. If the problem persists, Jim Brown at the Department's Flemingsburg district office can be reached at 906-45-2551.
