Watch out for carbon monoxide

The Kentucky State Police is warning motorists about the cold-weather danger of carbon monoxide poisoning from vehicle exhaust systems.

Carbon monoxide is a colorless, odorless by-product of automobile exhaust which is extremely dangerous if it leaks into the passenger compartment. Small amounts cause drowsiness which could result in a traffic accident. Larger amounts of carbon monoxide can kill.

Carbon monoxide poisoning is a year-round danger but the risks are even greater in late fall and winter when people spend more time in closed cars and garages.

The state police ask drivers to take the following precautions:

— Properly maintain the vehicle's exhaust system. Check the exhaust manifold, muffler, tailpipe and other parts of the exhaust system for leaks or have a mechanic do it.

— Always leave a window partially open whenever the engine is running even if the vehicle is parked. (Station wagon owners should open a window other than the rear window since exhaust fumes could blow up from the back of the car into the luggage platform area where children often ride.)

— Never leave a vehicle running in a closed, unventilated garage. In fact, it's safer to open the garage door before starting the car or truck.

Nicholas donors needed Nov. 15

Nearly 1200 pints of blood are needed on a daily basis to insure that patients in 38 area hospitals will have what they need, when they need it. The Central Kentucky Blood Center in Lexington is responsible for providing that blood to those hospitals which include Nicholas County Hospital.

Recently, due to industrial cutbacks, blood donations have drastically decreased to the point where the Center has had to receive blood from sources out of state to fill the gap. To help meet the demands for blood, the Center is urging that communities strongly support their local blood drives wherever possible.

The next drive for Nicholas County will be on Monday, Nov. 15, from 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. and from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Carlisle United Methodist Church. Organizers are hoping to match or exceed their highest attendance which netted 131 pints in October of 1979. "If there ever was a time that records needed to be broken, this is it," commented Carolyn Febish, representative for the Center. "In the last six months we have seen a 25 percent increase in the number of daily transfusions and there seems to be no end in sight. Without a strong effort in the communities we serve, it will become very difficult for us to guarantee blood availability."

Persons interested in the donation process or the Nicholas County Blood Program may contact Rev. Dave Stancil at 289-5293 for further information.

Canvass scheduled on liquor attitudes

"Citizens for a Better Community," a group formed to oppose the sale of alcoholic beverages in Carlisle, Kentucky, met at the First Baptist Church on Thursday, Oct. 28. Those in attendance were David Stancil, Dottie Marshall, Bob Gipson and Bill Guthrie, officers of the organization, and Virginia Lee Coatney, Kash Grimes, Harold Mitchell and Calvin Wills, precinct chairpersons for the upcoming local option election.

Plans were made for a city-wide canvass to take place Nov. 13-18. The purpose of this canvass is to determine the attitude of the people toward the local option election and to encourage the population to register and vote.

Those wishing to make contributions of either money or effort toward this campaign may contact any of the above officers or precinct chairpersons. Those wishing to mail contributions may do so to the following address: Dottie Marshall, Citizens for a Better Community, 205 Kennedy Heights, Carlisle, Ky. 40311.

Jackets overthrow Frankfort 43-0

by Pam Sparks

As the Jackets huddled together celebrating their overwhelming victory, the Jackettes left the field "panting," tails between their legs. The Bluejackets led through the entire game leaving Frankfort scoreless at the final buzzer, the score 43-0.

Paul Tubbs received the opening kickoff for Nicholas County and ran 18 yards up the field. On the next play Robert Hopkins dodged Panther defense, rushing 55 yards and scoring the first touchdown of the game. The extra point kick attempt by McGuffey failed.

Paul Tubbs then recovered a Frankfort fumble and ran to the Frankfort six yard line. Steve Anderson ran the six yards for the score. McGuffey's extra point conversion pass to Anderson was incomplete. McGuffey intercepted a pass putting the Jackets on the Nicholas County 38 yard line. A 35 yard pass from McGuffey to Ken Baker moved Jackets into position to score. Anderson completed an 18 yard pass to Rocky Young for the score. The extra point run by Anderson failed, leaving the score at the end of the first quarter 18-0.

Second quarter

In the second quarter Anderson rushed 20 yards to the Frankfort 34 yard line. From there, McGuffey passed to Ken Baker, scoring a touchdown. The extra point kick attempt by McGuffey failed.

Pat Pope intercepted a Panther pass and carried the ball to the Frankfort 10 yard line. Keith Williams rushed for the touchdown. The attempted extra point pass from McGuffey to Anderson was incomplete. Nicholas County ended the half with a pass intercepted by

GOD SPEAKS TO US

God speaks to us in the morning when children as light-winged birds are flitting with joy all around us—a joy far too sacred for words.

God speaks to us in the shadows that are cooling the noon-day sun, be careful, dear parents, He whispers the task is not easily done.

God speaks to us at the twilight when the children are scattered and gone, in the still, small breezes He whispers has the game been lost or been won?

12 percent for the month of September as part of the Buy American movement.

"Most of the activities are being coordinated by the state Department of Labor and the Public Protection and Regulation Cabinet."

A secretary who received one of the Gerrian-made typewriters said the HIM she had was "sent out into the field" when one was needed. "Olympic won't service machines in the field," she said in explaining the swap out.

When September was gone, the patriotic show had closed and foreign made typewriters moved onto the scene in Frankfort in October.

There's always been debate about the "lowest and best" terms in state purchases. The lowest prices haven't always been the best and the favored administration friend seemed to have the "best" prices.

Now, about that law. Brown didn't pay any attention to it when he bought the $1.8 million helicopter without legislative approval. Nor did Transportation Secretary Frank Metts pay any attention to the law when he let a turnkey contract for a bridge in Shelby County.

But, Kentucky is run like a business. There's no business like show business.

Skycare carries 100th patient

Jewish Hospital SkyCare, a helicopter service available from Nicholas County Hospital to other hospitals and Louisville, has announced it carried its 100th patient during early October.

Many of the patients, Jewish Hospital said, had suffered spinal cord injuries, were multiple trauma victims, cardiac and obstetrical emergencies, or victims of drug overdose.

These patients were flown to hospitals in Louisville, Lexington, Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Knoxville.

The helicopter pickups are charged out at $100 for a landing fee and so much a mile for transportation. A trip from Nicholas County to Louisville, for example, would cost between $400 and $500.

Primary advantages of the SkyCare system appear to be the smooth ride and quickness of the trip, with the pelicopter, in many cases, landing right on, or next to, the hospital.

had purchased a plant in North Carolina to make yarn with Industrial Revenue Bonds and that the system had worked very well.

Sewing equipment replaced

"At Blue Grass Industries we will replace some sewing equipment," Fred Holmes announced. "We will also update the air conditioning, improve working conditions and improve the energy situation with respect to cost."

Mayor Hughes and City Superintendent Vanlandingham questioned Jockey officials closely about their future gas and water needs, because of the new gas lines going in now. But Jockey officials refused to be tied down to an answer on future expansion saying only "we'll have to see what the economy does."

"What we're doing here is stabilizing the jobs that 700 people now hold at the Carlisle plants," President Haney said. "Rumlers get started about a whole lot of things when you put in new equipment. But we're not eliminating any jobs, in fact we're working overtime right now in a depressed economy. We're doing real well, better than a lot of other people."

No matter how bad the economy gets," Jockey's Fred Holmes said, "folks have still got to have underwear."
