Shumate's

same time being practical. A show heifer may look the part, he says, but be unable to do as well as a brood cow.

Windstone cows must calve every year and have the type of calves that will in turn make money for the commercial producer. If they also fit the description for a show animal, it's a welcome plus.

Show qualities

"We've tried to walk the fence, to keep cows with show qualities as far as being up off the ground, being long, clean and feminine, yet good producers at the same time," Cliff says.

Showing is an important promotional tool for the breed, he adds, although Windstone does not participate in the showring.

"I do not downgrade the segment of the industry that shows, but the commercial man is the heart of our business," Cliff says.

Windstone does not stress a color preference in the selection of the higher percentage cattle, but leans towards the solid color black, red or grays in the lower bloods. This prejudice mirrors the demand of their commercial buyers.

The farm's local commercial market consists of Kentucky breeders, with small herds of 10-50 cows. Many sales come through word-of-enouth and most are to repeat customers.

Windstone normally sells private treaty but has made an exception this year in planning a herd reduction sale this month. Over 100 head will sell, many being older cows, incuding several of the original French imports.

Since the addition of a neighboring farm earlier this year, Windstone's 1,000-plus acres can grow the feed for and carry over 400 cows and calves. The farm crew under Hatton's management puts up corn silage, rolls 1,000 large round bales of hay each year and oversees about 100 acres in tobacco.

The Shumates are already searching out new bloodlines and young groups of cows to add after their sale. They plan slowly to rebuild the herd, still keeping the emphasis of percentage cattle with a French fullblood base.

"We are so pro-Simmental it would be hard to imagine doing anything else," Cliff says.

The world's third largest wheat exporter, Australia ranks behind only the United States and Canada.

craves and never gets, or being apprehended, go to prison, get his hands clean of ink and have time to read and perchance write a book. For nearly all who dabble in the viscous fluid that "makes millions think" believe they could write rings around Sinclair Lewis (and they might do it, too) and show Irvin Cobb a thing or two, (which I doubt) — if they only had the time. Which they never have.

So as I bathe and dress I fall to thinking of my twenty-five years spent in trying to tease a competency from a country weekly and fatlie years they seem to me in my beastly morning mood. For experience has dimmed the lustre of the high hopes and brave ideals of the tyro who gloated at the new name in the mast-head that November morning years ago. Recalcitrant cylinder presses, antiquated machinery and ten cents per column inch have dimmed the hopes and shattered the ideals of many a would-be journalist, and those first few years these did dim and shatter me with a vengeance. But they left my finances as they found them, having there nothing to work on, nor ever will, I reckon.
