MRS. DALLAS STOCKDALE, 84, of Russell, Ky., died Saturday, Aug. 28, 1982, in the Fleming County Hospital. She was a native of Highland County, daughter of the late Louis C. and Lucille Stanford Brown, and widow of Dallas Stockdale. She was a member of the M. Pugh Baptist Church. Surviving are several nieces and nephews. Services were held Aug. 31, from Five Brothers Funeral Home by the Rev. Forrest Harrison. Burial in Mayfield Cemetery.

State computer under budget

The state's computer operation cost $6 million under budget for the last fiscal year, according to state officials. Total data processing cost for the fiscal year were $28 million compared with $34 million for the previous fiscal year. The Department of Information Services budget allocation was $32 million. Robert Neasham, commissioner of the agency that manages the computer system, said expenditures were held to less than $2 million in data processing cost were spent by other state agencies.

In the 17 months since the data processing system was reorganized, Finance and Administration Secretary George Factor and Neasham have reversed a system which costs were appearing out of control and which were falling as sharply as they were rising, according to Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. "Costs were soaring at an annual rate of 20 percent and for the last fiscal year were projected at $60 million. We have cut that estimate more than 40 percent while providing significant increases in service with 20 percent fewer personnel," the governor said.

retirees, have not been able to purchase the amount of goods they otherwise might have bought. The current world recession in general has cut down on demand for American products. James said that major importers, particularly in West Europe, have been contending with economic problems similar to those here, thus slow economic growth has stalled consumer demand.

Since January 1980, the foreign exchange value of the dollar has made exports more expensive for many key customers. "The dollar is about 15 percent over-valued on a trade basis," said James. "Some nations were paying more for some U.S. farm goods in late 1981 than they were a year earlier because their currencies were worth less in terms of American dollars."

AG FORECAST IN KENTUCKY
Kentucky's farm financial situation generally is healthy when measured by current national norms. The national average per-farm debt is about $75,000, and, according to Dr. Wilson Hourigan, UK Extension agricultural policy specialist, that's close to reflecting the situation in Kentucky. "The mean per-farm debt in Kentucky will be in the $70-100,000 range," he said.

As in the rest of the nation, the state's larger farms are carrying most of the debt load. Hourigan pointed out, the number of large Kentucky farms is relatively small. "In 1981, only one percent of the state's 110,000 farms sold more than $40,000 worth of farm products," he said. "Twenty-seven percent sold between $10,000 and $40,000, while 64 percent of the farms sold less than $10,000 worth of commodities."

Credit Available
In spite of national reports of farmers selling their operations at a record pace in order to pay off debt or keep up payments, Hourigan said most Kentucky farmers have been able to borrow money. "The credit supply is fairly adequate," he said. "Well-organized farmers who have been in the business for some time, have indicated that their credit needs are being met."

The national delinquency rate for farm borrowers at the Farm House Administration is now 29 percent. The rate in Kentucky is 16 percent, said Bobby Reynolds, director of farmers' programs at the state's Farm Credit headquarters in Lexington. "That's the third lowest rate in the country, behind Iowa and Wisconsin."

Milk that doesn't go in the refrigerator

Not immediately, not everywhere, but at bargain prices. "Despite all these caveats," said Edward T. Coughlin of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, "consumers soon may be able to go to their local stores and pick up unrefrigerated packaged milk products that have been successfully processed and can be stored for at least three months without refrigeration." Coughlin is director of the dairy division of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service.

"When consumers want to use the milk, they can cool it and have a palatable product that tastes like fresh milk," Coughlin said. Aseptic milk, also described as sterile or ultra high temperature (UHT) milk, has been available for many years in some European countries where home refrigeration is not standard. It is made by processing milk at ultra-high temperatures for a very short time and then packaging it in special protective containers.

The heat treatment process, now approved by the government, destroys almost all of the bacteria that commonly cause dairy products to sour. The special aseptic packages preserve that protection. Currently, this type of processing and special packaging also will make the product more expensive.

"There is a need for such products in many parts of the world where refrigeration is limited or where milk is not produced locally," said Coughlin. "Plans in the United States that have
