Nicholas District Court — Feb. 16, 1983
Honorable Jack Arnold, Chief District Judge

Terry Jolly Sr., Judy Jolly, 82-M-170, 82-M-171, failure to enroll children in state approved school, KRS 159.010, KRS 159.180. Defense motion to dismiss sustained.

CATS AND DOGS DREAM

Ever though they can't talk about them, cats and dogs do have dreams. Scientific studies show that when these animals first go to sleep they fall into a quiet state — and then start to dream.

Strategy meeting

Louisville attorney Ted Amshoff Jr. is shown here counseling church leaders after getting charges dropped against two Carlisle children for "truancy." The decision in Nicholas District Court could have repercussions far beyond the county lines for other children who attend so-called private "non-accredited" church schools. — Mercury photo.

A packed house

The Mercury counted 363 persons inside the courtroom at the "truancy" hearing in district court last week. (See story.) About 60 more were standing in the upstairs hallway and along the stairwell. Another 20 or so were downstairs. A few stood outside, so the crowd was estimated at around 500 or a little more. — Mercury photo.

60 burley warehouses receiving carryover

by Bennett Roach

Sixty tobacco warehouses in 21 cities and towns were designated this week as receiving stations for 1982 crop carryover burley, to be delivered March 28 through April 22.

Beginning March 21, growers wishing to participate in the emergency one-year program may telephone their nearest processor or warehouse, to schedule deliveries. The program has been set up by the USDA to assist farmers with the excessively large 1982 crop.

Fifty-four of the warehouses are in Kentucky, the others in Indiana and Ohio. Eligible growers under the program may have their tobacco taken by the Burley Tobacco Growers Cooperative Association, to be processed, stored, and then offered for sale next season. Any unsold then will be held under loan, with advance payment at 1983 loan rates.

Processors and warehouses participating in this area are:

Parker Tobacco Co. Inc., Maysville, 606-564-5571, or Cynthiana-Double M Dixie Warehouse, 606-234-2919; Lebus Warehouse, 606-234-5007 or 234-5964; Harrison House, 606-234-2315; Enterprise, 606-234-5235; Pepper, Peak and Florence, 606-234-5757 or 234-4878.

Maysville-Kentucky King, 606-564-6801 or 564-6802; Home, 606-564-6801 or 564-6802; Crain, 606-564-6801 or 564-6802; Independent, 606-564-6801 or 564-6802.

Mt. Sterling-Growers Warehouse, 606-498-3849; Home Warehouse, 606-498-2388.

Paris-Farmers Warehouse No. 4, 606-987-3508 or 987-3560.

No phone calls will be handled at receiving stations until March 21, between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Growers must first obtain a marketing card or written statement from their county ASCS office. Any deliveries must be graded into official USDA standard grades, carrying price supports.

An official government grader will inspect all deliveries, and growers will receive a receipt listing weight and grade of each lot. Later the grower will receive a Grower Agreement, for signing and returning to the Association.

Eligible for carryover deliveries are poundage in excess of 100 percent of the farmer's 1982 quota, provided he had marketed 110 percent of his quota, or within 200 pounds of that amount.

The usual processing and handling procedures will be followed, and the tobacco will be offered for sale by sealed bids, beginning as soon as possible beginning Oct. 1, 1983.

Any carryover then unsold for satisfactory price will be tendered for loan under the 1983 program, with net proceeds (less insurance, storage, grading and No Cost Fund fees, etc.) to be distributed to growers as loan advance payments.

There will be no other charges to the growers.

Centel introduces public affairs network

Centel Cable Television Company has introduced C-SPAN, the national public affairs network, to subscribers of the city's cable television service. The new programming is available on cable channel six, announced Terry Vogt, a Centel spokesman. Vogt announced the new service at a recent Carlisle City Council meeting.

C-SPAN features live and taped coverage of the U.S. House of Representatives, Congressional hearings and committee meetings and important speeches before the National Press Club. Interviews with Congressmen and other public figures, most recently President Reagan, are also a hallmark of the service.

There is also a movement underway to broaden the range of C-SPAN's coverage to include the daily business of the U.S. Senate, said Vogt. That issue still remains to be decided by the Senate, he added.

C-SPAN is delivered to Carlisle cable TV subscribers via RCA's Satcom IIIR satellite, which orbits the earth in a stationary path 23,000 miles above the equator. The cable company receives the transmissions at its earth station receive site at the base of the city's water tower and distributes the signal throughout Carlisle.

Centel serves over 500 homes in Carlisle. The Richmond-based firm provides cable TV services to over 40,000 subscribers in Central Kentucky and Southern Indiana.

UK receives tobacco extension research funds

The University of Kentucky College of Agriculture has received $173,000 as the second installment of a four-year, $1 million grant made by the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company to support tobacco Extension programs and tobacco production research.

Dr. Charles E. Barnhart, dean of the College of Agriculture, received the checks Jan. 19 from Arnold Miller, agricultural research and development coordinator for R.J. Reynolds.

The $173,000 funding for 1983 supports several UK Cooperative Extension Service tobacco activities and burley research projects:

— A graduate level, three-week short course in the newest tobacco production techniques for county Extension agents. Fourteen Kentucky county Extension agents participated in the short course last year.

— A one-week field study tour for county Extension agents. Held for the first time last year, the tour provides in-depth training in tobacco problem diagnosis, field research and burley marketing.

— Recognition of excellence in tobacco Extension work. Five outstanding county Extension agents were selected for awards last year, with five more to be honored this year.

— An R.J. Reynolds Extension professorship that recognizes distinguished tobacco Extension work by a faculty member and provides a salary supplement. Dr. Joe Smiley, UK Extension agronomist, has been named to the Reynolds Extension professorship.

— A graduate assistantship for a master's or doctoral student interested in a career in tobacco Extension work. Last year, a master's candidate in agronomy received the assistantship.

— Two post-doctoral fellowships in tobacco research.

— Tobacco Extension apprenticeships for undergraduates. During this past year, five students have worked with Extension specialists in ag economics, agronomy, entomology, plant pathology and ag engineering.

— Undergraduate research apprenticeships, a new program beginning in 1983. Several students interested in careers in tobacco research, education or industry will be selected in March to work with UK researchers in ag economics, engineering, agronomy, plant pathology and entomology.

The continuing and new Extension and research programs funded by the R.J. Reynolds monies are designed to increase the productivity and profit for Kentucky tobacco growers, Barnhart said.

The UK College of Agriculture and R.J. Reynolds announced the million-dollar grant by the tobacco company in August 1981, with the first installment presented in January 1982.

Since 1962, R.J. Reynolds has contributed $883,893 to tobacco research, Extension and education programs at the University of Kentucky.
