Kay's Kitchen

By Kay Fisher

Those lovely tall rosy-red stalks of rhubarb are producing now, and the more you cut them the better. They will continue giving you rhubarb for weeks to come. If you are selecting the rhubarb in the market, look for large crisp red stalks, and the leaves, though not edible, are an indication of the freshness, so select crisp green leaves.

Here are some recipes that may be a bit different, though it is hard to beat just stewed rhubarb with a bit of shortbread stuck in it and served with thick cream.

RHUBARB SQUARES

3 cups diced rhubarb
1 (3-oz.) package strawberry gelatin
1 cup flour
2 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup shortening
½ cup milk
1 egg, beaten
½ cup sugar
½ cup flour
¼ cup margarine
Whipped topping or ice cream

Combine rhubarb and gelatin; mix well and set aside.

Combine 1 cup flour, 2 tablespoons sugar, baking powder and salt; cut in the shortening until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Press mixture into bottom and three-fourths inch up sides of a greased and floured nine-inch baking pan. Spread rhubarb mixture over the top and set aside.

Combine ½ cup sugar and ¼ cup flour; cut in margarine until mixture is crumbly. Sprinkle over rhubarb; bake at 375 degrees for 35-40 minutes. Serve with topping or ice cream.

RHUBARB WHIP

1 pound rhubarb, cut in 1-inch pieces
½ cup sugar
¼ cup water
1 (3-oz) package strawberry gelatin
½ cup cold water
½ cup whipping cream, whipped
Fresh sliced strawberries

Combine rhubarb, sugar and ¼ cup water in a medium saucepan; mix well and bring to a boil and cook, stirring occasionally for about eight minutes. Add gelatin and cook, stirring constantly, until gelatin dissolves. Remove from heat; stir in ½ cup cold water and chill until mixture is slightly thickened. Beat on high speed of mixer until light and fluffy; fold in whipped cream. Spoon into serving dishes and chill 30-45 minutes. Top with fresh sliced strawberries.

RHUBARB-RAISIN PIE

1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons flour
3 eggs, separated
½ cup orange juice
2 cups diced rhubarb
¼ cup raisins
1 unbaked 9-inch pastry shell
½ teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
½ cup sugar
Dash of cinnamon

Combine 1 cup sugar and flour; stir lightly. Beat egg yolks slightly; add yolks and orange juice to sugar mixture, mixing well. Stir in rhubarb and raisins. Pour into pastry shell; bake at 375 degrees for 35-40 minutes. Cover edges with foil after 30 minutes to prevent excess browning.

Combine egg whites, vanilla and cream of tartar; beat until soft peaks form. Combine ¼ cup sugar and cinnamon; gradually add to egg whites, beating until stiff peaks form. Spread meringue over warm pie, sealing edges well. Bake at 350 degrees for 12-15 minutes, or until golden brown. Cool.

1943 and 1944 Carlisle graduates are scheduling reunions Aug. 19

The 1943 and 1944 graduating classes of Carlisle High School will observe their 40th and 39th reunions with a reception and dinner at Carnico Country Club Aug. 19 at 6:30 p.m., which is the day before the annual CHS Alumni Banquet.

A committee composed of Marie Shrout Lowe, John E. Soper, Emily Asbury Wolf and Nathan Young is planning the activities. Anyone with addresses of out-of-town members is asked to contact any committee member or mail the information to Young at the Deposit Bank of Carlisle.

Reservations at $10 per person may be sent to the bank or any committee member.

An early response from all graduates of these classes will be appreciated, especially those from out-of-town who read this initial announcement in The Carlisle Mercury.

The joint celebration will replace the 40th reunion of the 1944 class scheduled for next year.

Controversial spy case will air on KET June 19

"The Unquiet Death of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg," a full-scale re-examination of the controversial Rosenberg-Sobell atomic spy case of the early 1950's, will air on KET Sunday, June 19, at 10 p.m.

Thirty years after the execution of America's so-called "atom spies" and on the eve of two new books and a feature film ("The Book of Daniel" with Ed Asner), this documentary retraces the lives of the Rosenberg and their controversial trial with a new introduction and discussion of evidence uncovered within the last five years, including newly released government files.

Julius Rosenberg, a machine shop owner on New York's lower East Side, and his wife, Ethel, housewife and mother, were found guilty of passing atomic secrets to the Soviet Union in 1951. They were the first and only Americans to be put to death under civil law for espionage. They were also the first married couple ever executed in the United States, and their execution in June 1953 was accompanied by protest marches both here and abroad.

Thank You

The Nicholas County Elementary P.T.O. officers wish to express their sincere appreciation and thanks to Gerald Hammons, Mrs. Marium Williams, school faculty, parents, The Carlisle Mercury and to everyone who worked and supported the Fall Festival for helping to make our 1982-83 school year a success. Profits from our festival allowed us to help obtain much needed curtains for the elementary school stage area. Without your ongoing support and cooperation, this would not have been possible.

We wish continued success and our support to the P.T.O. and to next year's officers and your endeavors.

Sincerely,
1982-83 P.T.O. Officers

William Caldwell home last in series to be toured

(Editor's note: This is last in a series of features on homes to be toured Sunday, June 5, sponsored by the Nicholas County Historical Society. Other events of the day will include a luncheon, dedication of the Carlisle Depot's garden, and exhibit of local craftsmen's work. Tickets may be purchased at the depot.)

by Rob Lane

To tell the story of the William Caldwell home one must tell the story of four homes, two families, and practically all the Headquarters-Walnut Grove section of Nicholas County. The Caldwell home is located nine miles west of Carlisle on a 251 acre farm on Collier Pike.

A group of 14 men set out from Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, in 1775. Among them was one Henry Thompson. After traveling down the Ohio to Maysville they entered the Bluegrass. They cast lots to see who would claim what sections of the country.

Henry Thompson's 1000 acre land claim fell on the banks of Hinkston Creek. He gave his brother-in-law, John McClintock, one half of his claim for financing the expedition.

Because of the danger of Indian attacks, Thompson did not bring his family to Kentucky until 1784. He built a rude cabin near an everlasting spring on what is now known as Arthur Pike.

One year later he built a stone "mansion house" as he referred to it. This house stood until recently.

John McClintock built a two story brick house on Walnut Grove. That house still stands and is owned by the Burden family. McClintock's son also built a house on Collier Pike on land now owned by G.W. Sexton. That house has been demolished.

Meanwhile Thompson was making a name for himself in the area. According to Collin's History of Kentucky he was the first man to plant potatoes in Kentucky. He was one of the founders of the Associated Reformed Presbyterian Church in 1801. That building was located on the Millersburg-Cynthiana Pike, just north of the Walnut Grove junction. He was part owner in a mill located on the site of a buffalo crossing on Hinkston. He was father of five children.

Home dates from 1820's

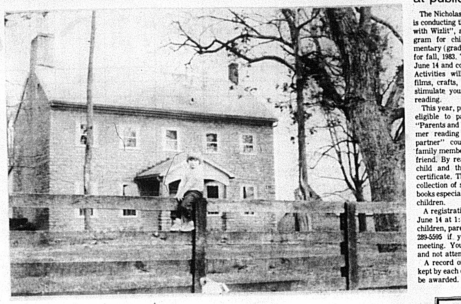
Thompson died sometime between 1824 and 1827. His land was divided among his five children. The land where the Caldwell home is located was left to Henry Jr. Although the Caldwells are uncertain of the exact date, it was about this time that their house was built.

Henry Thompson Jr. owned the property until his death in 1853. Then his son, John Thompson, owned it. Perrin's History of Bourbon, Scott, Nicholas and Harrison Counties says the property was still in the Thompson family in 1883.

In 1899 the John Collier Hardy heirs sold the property to E.P. Clark. His heirs in turn sold it to John Franklin Caldwell in 1913 for $123 an acre. To date four generations of Caldwells have lived there.

According to Carolyn Wooley, Kentucky Heritage Commission, the Caldwell home is, "as well now as any stone house of that period." It is unusual in that it is a five bay house with a central hall flanked by two rooms. Most homes of the period were built with only a hall and parlor.

The house is constructed of two stone walls with a space between. This space is filled with a mixture of straw, clay, small rocks and even buffalo hair. The rock was originally pointed with a mixture of burnt limestone dust, sand and water. This would seal the building, but was not long lasting. The Caldwell house was repointed in the 1930's.



The William Caldwell home

Young Breckinridge Caldwell sits astride the fence in front of the family home on Collier Pike, one of those to be toured Sunday, June 5. The stone home dates from the 1820's and is "as well done as any stone house of that date." The house has double stone walls, with straw, clay, rocks and buffalo hair in between. — Photo submitted.

Federal style

The house's predominant style is Federal. This influence is seen especially in the woodwork. The living room has a fireplace wall of intricately carved solid walnut paneling, with two curved topped bookcases. Caldwell and his father spent 10 months peeling layers of paint off the paneling. The doors are known as "cross and Bible" doors. An unusual feature is a series of iron hooks in an upstairs room. Many speculate these were used to suspend quilting frames.

Behind the Caldwell home is one remaining slave cabin. Originally the Thompsons held extensive numbers of slaves. It is interesting to note that the will of Henry Thompson's daughter provided money for the return of her slaves to Africa.

The house has undergone other changes throughout the years. In 1918 a tornado tore through the section blowing down a barn and destroying a gable on the house. The gable was replaced with wood rather than stone, and a chimney was rebuilt with brick. Caldwell's mother says she lived there for years before she realized one chimney was stone and the other was brick.

During the 1930's and '40's Caldwell's grandparents extensively remodeled the house. A combination wood and stone kitchen wing was removed and the current kitchen and an upstairs bedroom were built. At this time the house was electrified and a furnace and bath installed. A garage was built of the kitchen stones, which Caldwell plans to convert into a blacksmith shop.

When Caldwell and his wife, the former Catherine Kehne returned to live there in 1980, they enclosed a back porch and replaced the furnace with a multifuel furnace. This woodburning furnace, plus another stove, provide heat for the house. Beams were also exposed in the den. The house has random width ash flooring, but carpeting was used for warmth. A stone fireplace was reopened in an upstairs bedroom.

Future plans call for the construction of a stone patio and replacement of outside shutters.

Heirlooms

One of the Caldwell's family heirlooms include a walnut cradle which has been in their family four generations. Another is a cherry tall case clock belonging to Caldwell's great grandmother Elizabeth Galt, a native of Mason County. A secretary and parlor set belonged to Caldwell's grandfather.

Caldwell is employed in Cynthiana by Wedco as a health environmentalist. Catherine substitutes in the Nicholas County schools. They are parents of two children, William Breckinridge, four, and Alexander Reed, two.

Cardiac classes to be held at Harrison Memorial Hospital

The Nursing Service Department of Harrison Memorial Hospital in Cynthiana will present a continuing education offering Basic Cardiac Arrhythmia Interpretation June 3-July 5. Classes will be conducted on Tuesday evenings from 6-9 p.m. and on Thursday mornings from 9-12 in the hospital education room. A participant may attend either the morning or evening session.

Three contact hours will be awarded each week for five consecutive weeks. The offering has been approved by the Kentucky Board of Nursing for 15 contact hours offered in five three-hour sessions.

Topics of discussion include anatomy of conduction system, format for interpreting cardiac arrhythmias, clinical signs and symptoms, identifying EKG features, etiology, effect on patient and treatment of sinus, atrial, junctional and ventricular arrhythmias. Instructors for the course are Dr. Frank McKemie, Internist, and Marilyn Souders, R.N., and Julia Fulton, R.N.

Cost for the course is $10 per session or $50 total for Harrison Memorial Hospital employees and $15 per session or $75 total for all others. Pre-registration is required.

Quilt Symposium to be held at MSU

The Kentucky Heritage Quilt Society will present a two-day quilt symposium June 23-24 at Morehead State University, Morehead, during the annual Appalachian Celebration. Joyce Aufderheide, a nationally-known quiltmaker and quilt collector from New Ulm, Minn., will present a lecture entitled "A Backward Glance." Shelly Zegart of Louisville will show slides and discuss the recent quilt show "Kentucky Quilts 1800-1900."

Workshops on different quilting techniques will be offered during the two-day event.

For more information, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to KHQS, P.O. Box 23392, Lexington, KY or call 606-273-1034.

Summer reading at public library

The Nicholas County Public Library is conducting the "Reading Time Trek with Wishi", a summer reading program for children enrolled in elementary (grades one through 6) school for fall, 1983. The program will begin June 14 and continue through July 19. Activities will include story hours, films, crafts, and other programs to stimulate your children's interest in reading.

This year, preschool children will be eligible to participate in a special "Parents and Reading Partners" summer reading program. A "reading partner" could be a parent, other family members, a babysitter or just a friend. By reading 20 books both the child and the partner will earn a certificate. The library has a special collection of sturdy, washable picture books especially designed for preschool children.

A registration program will be held June 14 at 1:30 p.m. for all preschool children, parents and babysitters. Call 289-5095 if you plan to attend this meeting. You may call and register and not attend the meeting.

A record of the books read will be kept by each child and certificates will be awarded.
