KENTUCKY'S CIVIL WAR ROLE EVENT TO BE RECALLED JUNE 4
Kentucky's important role in the Civil War will be recalled the weekend of June 4 as an annual event is held at the "battle" at WaveLand state historic site in Lexington.
The annual event draws hundreds of spectators to see authentically dressed soldiers re-enact Civil War battles and camp life. This year's program includes a drill and weapons demonstration at 10 a.m. Saturday, followed by uniform competition and a Civil War skirmish. Sunday is highlighted by a full-scale battle re-enactment, scheduled for 2:30 p.m. On both days, other activities are scheduled from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.
The WaveLand Museum opens at 9 a.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. Sunday.
The site itself is steeped in history. Daniel Boone laid off the original 2,000 acre tract for nephew Daniel Boone Bryan. His son, Joseph, built the WaveLand mansion that serves as home for the state museum. The museum features many Civil War relics.
WaveLand is located on Highway Mill Road in southern Fayette County.

Beef offsets poultry, food prices stable

Falling prices for poultry and dairy product nearly offset a five percent jump in beef costs to leave Kentucky retail food prices virtually unchanged.
Kentucky Farm Bureau's monthly market survey placed the cost of a selected food items at $2.99 in May, up just from the April level, and as full one percent below the price standstill of a year ago.
Considerable contrast was evident in comparing this month's price movement to the survey three types of meat — poultry, pork and beef — included in the survey. Beef cuts, reflecting recent improvement in live cattle prices, ranged upward while pork remained stable and poultry items fell by seven percent.
Dairy products, poored by a 10-cent drop in the price of a gallon of two percent milk, moved down 2.5 percent and fruits and vegetables averaged 1.1 percent lower. Grain-based foods such as bread, food and meal, were unchanged from April.
Fresh cucumbers posted the largest price decline in the past 30 days, the survey found, cutting 16 cents less apiece, at 40 cents. Several items showed 10-cent unit declines, including pound portions of American and cheddar cheese, fresh tomatoes and pork loin chops.

On the opposite side of the ledger, ribeye steak registered the biggest price hike, jumping 26 cents to a 44-cent per pound average. Other price gains were faba potatoes, up 10 cents to a 19-pound bag, skin-on roast, 12 cents per pound higher and not roast, an average of 17 cents a pound.
Market showed up with the lowest local marketbasket average for May while live classed the high spot. The 20-Kentucky communities surveyed by Farm Bureau Women reflected a range of more than $11 between high and low, an annually wide spread.
Farm prices, many times an indicator of future retail price movement, showed a healthy gain during the Department of Agriculture's most recent reporting period.

BANKING SCHOOL TO BE HELD AT UK JUNE 4-8
Approximately 300 persons are expected to come to the University of Kentucky campus June 4 through June 8 for the 30th annual Banking School.
The group will be divided into first and second year students, said Robert G. Pigg, assistant dean of University Extension which is sponsoring the institute with the UK College of Business and Economics.
Composed of lower and middle management personnel from banks across Kentucky, the groups will study such subjects as internal control, bank accounting, economic forecasting, investments and marketing, credit, management of bank funds and banking law updates.
The banking school will be taught by professionals from various banks in the state and by UK faculty members.
Further information is available by calling 606-257-3381.
