Hot weather helps

It's been a long time coming to Kentucky this year, but summer is sending its first hint of hot, humid weather. A Cabinet for Human Resources health official hopes people take the hint and study up on first aid for the two most serious heat-related illnesses, heat exhaustion and heat stroke.

While both illnesses are caused by exposure to too much heat and humidity there is a critical difference in the two, says Dr. Ward Hinds, director for epidemiology in the cabinet's Department for Health Services.

The critical difference is that heat exhaustion is rarely fatal, while heat stroke kills us to one-half its victims.

Kentucky crop news

Agricultural News

Little or no rainfall and warmer temperatures characterized weather for the week ending June 12. Most weather stations reported no precipitation during the week, allowing corn planting to near completion except in some of the river bottom land. Good progress was also made on tobacco setting and soybean planting. Approximately 10 to 15 percent of Kentucky's cropland is still considered too wet to till. Some bottomland in the western part of the state is still covered by back water. Statewide, soil moisture was 83 percent adequate and 15 percent surplus.

Corn

Planting progressed to 88 percent complete compared to 99 percent last year and 94 percent for the average. Some replanting was accomplished during the week. A considerable amount of acreage still intended to be planted will be for silage. The crop is in fair condition with an average height of five inches for emerged corn. The most advanced fields are still generally under a foot tall. Plant height is behind both last year and the five-year average due to the lateness of planting. Armyworms were reported with some farmers already spraying for control. There were reports of acreage originally intended for corn now shifting to soybeans or sorghum.

Tobacco

Burley is 47 percent set compared to 83 percent a year ago and an average of 72 percent. Set tobacco would benefit from a light rain. Bed growth has been irregular as some plants are still too small for transplanting. Plant supply is generally adequate with some localized shortages being reported. Some growers were cultivating during the week. Dark tobacco acreage is one-third set, about two weeks behind last year.

Soybeans

Planting advanced to 24 percent complete compared to 68 percent last year and the average of 58 percent. Planting progress as of June 12 equals 1981 for the latest on record. Some acreage originally planned for corn will now go into beans if weather permits. Overall early planted soybean condition is rated mostly fair.

Other crops and pasture

The condition of wheat remains to be mixed. In some areas the crop is deteriorating due to leaf diseases while in others the crop still looks good. Statewide, the crop is rated in fair to good condition and as of June 1 is expected to yield 39 bushels per acre, the same as last year. Barley harvest began during the week in western Kentucky.

"Heat stroke victims usually have a high fever and dry skin. Their pulse rate will be rapid and strong. Their breathing will be fast and deep. They may become unconscious. Move the victim to a cooler environment and reduce the body temperature with cold cloths or a cool bath. Use extreme caution. Do not give the victim alcohol drinks. Get medical help as soon as possible," Hinds said.

"Skin temperature and moistness is a key to the difference between the two conditions," Hinds said. Heat exhaustion victims perspire, so their skin feels moist or clammy. Heat stroke is a breakdown in the body's ability to carry off heat through perspiration. The heat stroke victim's skin is very hot and dry to the touch and usually appears flushed before it turns gray. Mental confusion or delirium may be noticed as early symptoms, usually followed by unconsciousness.

"If a heat-stroke victim is to have a fair chance of surviving, bystanders must act immediately," Hinds said: "Get professional medical attention as soon as possible, and start working right away to lower the victim's body temperature."

Hinds advised covering the victim's body with ice or pouring water or other cold liquid on the victim. Wet sheets may be wrapped around the body and fanned. The arms and legs should be rubbed vigorously to get the cooler blood circulating throughout the body.

If heat stroke causes convulsions, place a handkerchief or some other soft object between the victim's teeth to prevent injury, Hinds said.

"Heat stroke can cause the victim's internal temperature to go up quickly, even as high as 111 degrees," he said. "Immediate first aid and professional medical help are vital."

Heat exhaustion happens more frequently and is usually not a serious problem, Hinds said. A victim will continue to perspire and may experience nausea, a headache, confusion or a dizzy feeling.

Unless a heat exhaustion victim lapses into a coma, vomits repeatedly or cannot drink, professional medical help probably is not necessary. Hinds suggests that the victim be moved to a cool place and given liquids containing a small amount of salt if he is able to swallow. The symptoms of heat exhaustion usually disappear as the water and salt losses of the body are replaced.

Preventing heat-related illnesses is a matter of common sense, advises Hinds. "Obviously, staying out of extreme heat when possible will prevent these problems," he said. "A person who must be outside on a very hot day should rest frequently in a cool place and drink plenty of liquids. Persons with heart problems should be especially careful."
