BRITAIN SENDS ART EXHIBIT TO CINCINNATI

For the first time in its 215 year history, London's famous Royal Academy of Arts is sending a major collection to the United States. "Paintings from the Royal Academy, Two Centuries of British Art," with 41 works by the finest British artists of the 18th and 19th centuries, opened at the Cincinnati Art Museum March 2 and will run through April 17, 1983.

Founded in 1768, the Royal Academy is the oldest of Great Britain's arts institutions.

Warning about telephone lines

As daylight begins to linger and the earth softens, Kentuckians head outdoors to renew gardens and landscapes, and raise buildings and additions.

Carl Renz, district manager for South Central Bell, warns however that danger may lurk amongst the beans, begonias and bungalows — the danger of cutting a buried utility line.

"But when you dig, you need to be extremely careful about running into buried cable and lines for telephones, electricity, gas, water and others."

Renz said that all diggers — from backyard hobbyists to professional contractors — can avoid cutting utility lines by making a simple phone call before digging in.

"Folks should call the Kentucky Underground Utility Protection Center before turning that first shovelful of dirt," Renz said. "The center is nicknamed BUD, to remind you to call 'Before U Dig.' BUD's toll-free number is 1-800-752-6007.

Vet benefit book now available

The 1983 U.S. government's publication, "Federal Benefits for Veterans and Dependents," is now off the press and available to the public.

The 71-page booklet, prepared by the Veterans Administration, sells for $4.50. To order, persons should ask for the book by name, and the number: IS-1. The address is Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

The booklet contains a complete listing of all benefits available to veterans and their families or survivors. There are complete lists of all regional offices, medical centers, national cemeteries and vet centers throughout the nation. And there are alcohol and drug dependence treatment centers.

Telephone numbers, including toll-free numbers for regional offices, are listed.

The booklet is issued annually and incorporates all of the changes enacted by Congress during the past year. It is one of the most popular of all booklets printed by the government.

SSA fraud gets Bracken woman

Lena M. Wilson of Route 2, Brooksville was recently sentenced for her part in a social security fraud matter by Federal District Judge William O. Bertelsman, according to the Social Security Administration.

Ms. Wilson's son, William, according to the SSA, was a social security student beneficiary on the basis of full time attendance at Northern Kentucky College when, in fact, he never attended this school after graduating from Bracken County High School. On several occasions school reports were submitted to SSA which falsely indicated that William Wilson was a full time student. Lena Wilson aware that her son was not a student nevertheless negotiated 25 checks totaling $5,506 in unauthorized payment and pled guilty to knowingly embezzling the SSA benefits, SSA said.

PIK signup ends Friday

The Payment In Kind Program (PIK) signup ends Friday, March 11. The Department of Agriculture has announced that there will be no extension of the signup deadline. Under the PIK program farms with wheat, sorghum and corn bases may sign up to reduce their 1983 planted acres, and in return receive an amount of the commodity as payment for reducing planted acreage.

All eligible farmers have been sent several pre-sign up information about the PIK program. In Nicholas County we have approximately 220 farms eligible for the PIK program. On March 14 a sign-up report will be released to the news media giving details on the number of farmers and acreage signed up in the program.

Under the program, farmers are given the opportunity to bid to reduce their current planted acreage by as much as 1983. The sealed bids will be opened by the county committee at a public meeting on March 18. Producers will be notified after the 18th of those acreage bids accepted for the program.

Additional information can be obtained regarding the PIK program by contacting the local ASCS office at 302 East Main Street, Carlisle, phone 289-2234.

Stone barn on Brushy Creek

This barn is being used and is located on the Ball farm one-half mile north of the traffic island on U.S. 68 on the east side of the road. It is a one story 23 by 40 stone structure. It is said to have been a breeding barn for slaves. The owner from 1840-79, Pete Gaunce, said the slave chains were in the wall. — Mercury photo.

Consumer Alert

Local measured service for telephones

"Your telephone, the link between you and the rest of the world, is a vital communication device for millions, an instrument for instant contact with others," says Attorney General Steven L. Beshear. "We have been conditioned to rely on our telephone to such a great extent that it has become absolutely essential. Most people have also become accustomed to being charged a flat rate each month for their local service. This monthly charge includes making as many calls as you wish, and talking as long as you wish, so long as you call within a certain area."

Consider your reaction to paying for your local telephone service the same way that you pay for your long distance telephone service. If you are like many people, the idea of paying for your local service on a call-by-call basis is a new one and may not be readily accepted. This concept is called "local measured service," or LMS. It has been implemented in some parts of Kentucky on an optional basis. This concept has been hailed by some telephone industry representatives as one way to save money on telephone bills. However, some consumer representatives have said that local measured service is like having a pay phone in their home. In the complex world of telephone rates, such statements are perhaps oversimplified. Attorney General Beshear wants you, as a consumer, to be aware of what local measured service is and how it works.

According to one consumer consultant, local measured service is a system of pricing local telephone service by measured components: These components include:

JAZZ CLINIC TO BE HELD AT MSU

St. Louis trumpeter Clark Terry and his Jolly Giants will be the guest performers at Morehead State University's 1983 Jazz Clinic March 17-19.

Terry, now in his fifth decade as a jazz artist, has performed with such greats as Count Basie and as a featured soloist for eight years with Duke Ellington. He also was one of the first black musicians to join a network staff orchestra, spending more than a decade at NBC as a player on the Tonight Show Orchestra.

He will perform in concert on Thursday, March 17, in Wetherby Gym at 8 p.m. Admission is $5 at the door.

The clinic will also feature performances by MSU's own Guitar Ensemble, Jazz Ensemble II, Percussion Ensemble and the Jazz Bones.

(1) A monthly minimum charge which may or may not include a certain number of "free" calls.

(2) A charge for each local call placed.

(3) A charge for the duration of the call (e.g. one minute or five minutes).

(4) A charge for the distance of the call beyond a minimum zone.

(5) A charge based on the time of day that a call is made.

If these components sound familiar to you, it is because they are the same components that determine what you are charged for a long distance call. The components of frequency, duration, distance, and time of day would determine how much your telephone bill would be under a local measured service system. If you use your telephone frequently to make local calls, local measured service would probably cause your telephone bills to go up. If you use your telephone infrequently for local calls, local measured service could mean a decrease in your monthly bill.

Several groups have done studies on the effects of local measured service with varying conclusions. One point of agreement among the experts is that most people do not know how much they use their telephone for local calls. This makes it difficult for someone to decide how they feel about local measured service. Everyone wants to save money, but many feel there are other questions to be raised such as:

(1) Should phone users be required to pay for their amount of usage, just like an electric bill or gas bill?

(2) Will the consumer be able to understand his/her monthly bill?

(3) Will businesses "pass on" the cost of LMS to the consumer?

(4) Will the elderly and shut-ins suffer because of a lack of communication?

(5) What if you have a popular teenager who lives on the phone?

(6) Will people who live long distances from large cities face unusually higher bills?

The restructuring of the Bell Telephone System, to take place in 1983 and 1984, will affect significantly how you get and use telecommunication services. Many questions and controversial issues have been raised concerning local measured service for Kentuckians. Attorney General Beshear advises you to "learn as much as possible about LMS and weigh your options."

WORLD'S FAIR VISITORS HELPED KENTUCKY

Visitors to Knoxville's World Fair last year pumped an estimated $229 million directly or indirectly into Kentucky's economy according to a recent tourism survey.

The study also indicates a sizable portion of that total — $97 million — came from tourists who said they hadn't otherwise planned to visit Kentucky. The survey also reveals that 4,431 jobs were created in Kentucky by the fair.
