Tipson succeeds Clay as Eastern Ky. PCA director

Eastern Kentucky PCA held the third sectional annual meeting at Holiday Inn in Morehead last Thursday evening, Oct. 26. One of the important items of business was election of two directors. David Tipson was elected to succeed Raedle E. Clay, who has served three consecutive terms. Robert McMichael of Rush in Boyd County was re-elected. Other sectional meetings were held in Maysville and Oldham in Greenup County.

Members elected to the 1954 nominating committee with their respective offices are Cliff Vase, Carlisle; Steve Downan, Flemingsburg; Earl Lee Jones, Maysville; Mike Street, Owensboro; Epp D. Kiser, Grayson; Philip Chason, Greenup; Glenn Lacey, West Liberty; Donnie Sturgill, Louisa; James Wells tobacco coordinator for the Ohio Farm Bureau and the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, spoke to the PCA membership on problems facing the berry tobacco program.

One interesting feature of the Maysville sectional meeting was recognizing James Post of Nicholas County who has been a PCA member for 49 years. Charles Lykins, who farms in Lewis County, was also recognized for long time membership and for helping his three sons to become established as farmers and PCA members.

Eastern Kentucky PCA serves about 2,000 farmers members in 34 eastern Kentucky counties. The farmer owned cooperative will be observing 30 years of farm credit business during 1954, having been chartered in Flemingsburg on Feb. 15, 1924.
