Kay's Kitchen

By Kay Fisher

Usually this time of year I write about making pickles, conserves, and relishes. But since garden produce is so limited this year I must do something else. There are grapes ready now so something this week using Concord grapes.

GRAPE JELLY

Use slightly underripe grapes. It gives a more tart flavor. Place stemmed grapes in a kettle with a small amount of water, about ½ cup to 4 cups of grapes. Boil the grapes until soft. Strain them through a jelly bag. For each cup of juice add ¾ to 1 cup sugar. Cook only 4 cupfuls at a time.

Boil the juice rapidly for 5 minutes and skim it, if necessary. Add the sugar and stir until dissolved, and continue to boil the juice rapidly without stirring, until ready to remove from heat. Cook to 220 degrees to 222 degrees. If you like a softer jelly shorten the cooking time slightly.

I use a thermometer because I'm not very good at knowing the "sheeting stage."

GRAPE JUICE I

Wash Concord grapes. Pick them from the stems. Cover the grapes with cold water. Boil them until they are broken and seeds are separated. Strain through a colander. Strain the juice twice through a jelly bag. Measure the juice, allowing 1 cup sugar to 4 cups juice. Boil juice and sugar 20 minutes. Bottle juice. Cool and seal.

GRAPE JUICE II

Wash sound, ripe Concord grapes. Cover with boiling water and heat slowly to simmering. Do not boil. Cook slowly until fruit is very soft, then strain through a bag and add ¼ cup sugar to each quart of juice. Adjust lide and process 5 minutes in a boiling water bath.

GRAPE PIE

4 cups Concord grapes
¾ cup sugar
1½ tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon grated orange rind
1 tablespoon quick-cooking tapioca
Pastry for two crust pie

Stem and slip pulp from skins. Reserve skins. Cook pulp until seeds loosen. Press through colander to remove the seeds. Combine pulp and skins, and remaining ingredients. Let stand about 15 minutes.

Line a 9-inch pie pan with pastry. Fill with grape mixture. Cover with lattice top. Bake at 450 degrees for 10 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake 20 minutes longer.

Fall fire hazard begins

As the fall forest fire season approaches in Kentucky, attention should be focused on the long-term hidden damages to our timber resource resulting from forest fires.

The Kentucky Division of Forestry would like to inform everyone that during this time of year the state burning laws take effect and citations will be issued to those violating the law. A person violating these laws could have penalties or fines not less than $100 nor more than $500 or up to six months imprisonment.

Some of the fire laws are:

KRS 149.400 — Illegal to burn anything within 150 feet of woodland or brushland between the hours of 12 a.m. till 4:30 p.m. commencing on March 1, ending May 15, and Oct. 1, ending Dec. 15.

KRS 149.370 — Illegal to create a fire hazard in the woods.

KRS 149.375 — Illegal to have open fire on own land unless specific precautions are taken.

KRS 149.380 — Illegal to set fire on land owned by another.

KRS 149.390 — Illegal to set fire to capture or destroy game.

Any questions concerning the burning regulation or to report a forest fire should be referred to Gene Barnes, 498-5080, or Bradley Witt, 498-2546, or the Morehead District Office at 784-7504 (collect).

The primary loss is in the quality of damaged timber which becomes infected, stained and decayed by insects and diseases which gain entry into the tree through fire scars.

This loss averages 60 percent of the timber's value and may run as high as 75 percent of value. As an acre of the larger, fire-scarred timber matures and is sold, its value, and the resulting value added to the local economy by the manufacturing of the damaged resource, will average more than $2,000 less than if the fires had not injured the trees.

For every acre of woodland that burns, the loss in timber-related values averages $27 every year thereafter until the burned-over stand matures into saw timber. This accumulates to more than $2000 per acre eventually lost during the 75 years required for most woodland to reach maturity.

Task Force Report released on Missing/Exploited Children

The chairman of the Kentucky State Task Force on Exploited and Missing Children, Jefferson County Judge/Executive Mitch McConnell, released the Task Force final report during a press conference at the Jefferson County courthouse this week.

McConnell noted that Jefferson County has been the national leader in this field since he formed the Jefferson County Exploited and Missing Child Unit in 1980.

McConnell's final report on the work of the Kentucky Task Force makes 18 recommendations for further fight against child exploitation, including eight legislative proposals for the 1984 General Assembly. "When the Task Force's initiatives are adopted by the General Assembly, Kentucky, which is already the national leader in this field, will be light years ahead in its efforts to protect our children," McConnell said.

Task Force proposals include:

(1) Adoption of a Kentucky Missing Children's Act. This act sets up a computerized Missing Child Information Center and requires all law enforcement agencies to accept and investigate all reports of missing children immediately.

(2) Adoption of a Child Sexual Abuse and Exploitation Act. Legislation to allow taxpayers to donate $2 of their tax return to a "Child Victim's Trust Fund," which will be used to educate children to the dangers of sexual abuse and exploitation.

(3) Mandatory sentencing for child molesters. Legislation to make certain sexual offenses against children non-probatable, guaranteeing incarceration for molesters commensurate with the harm they have inflicted by their crimes.

(4) Youth serving agencies legislation. Passage of laws to allow all Youth Serving Agencies to request criminal record checks on persons applying for positions of authority over children.

(5) Unlawful transaction with a minor made a felony. Upgrade the offense of engaging in sexual activity with a minor to felony status. Other recommendations include initiating "call-back" programs to notify parents when a child fails to appear at school, providing "body-safety" programs to educate children about sexual abuse, and to continue the child fingerprinting programs which McConnell has initiated in all 120 Kentucky counties.

The final Task Force recommendation is to establish the Kentucky Alliance for Exploited and Missing Children, an organization of concerned citizens who will implement the recommendations of the report.

"There is no more reprehensible crime, no crime more deserving of serious punishment, than that of child exploitation and sexual abuse," McConnell states. "I urge all concerned Kentuckians to join the new Kentucky Alliance for Exploited and Missing Children and commit themselves to better protect our children."
