Special craft exhibit at Pioneer Museum

by Judy Bullington

It may seem odd in this age of high technology that the terms 'arts and crafts' are so prevalent. Arts and craft booths have become commonplace at the majority of special events. Guilds have developed on the local, state and national level. Fairs market handmade items and art galleries and museum display these as new media.

Chances are, everyone in our society has had some contact, however remote, with a craftsman or his handiwork. Few of us understand, or would question, how and why these products from the hand of man' came into being. Perhaps it was this mission to enlighten the general public that Charles Wilson Peale had in mind when he established the first museum on American soil. Since the inception of Peale's Philadelphia Museum in 1782 the role of museums has diversified and specialized.

TODAY our local citizens have access to several such educational institutions. The closest, and perhaps most often overlooked, is the Pioneer Museum located in Blue Licks Battlefield State Park.

On permanent display there are the arts of crafts of past ages. Examples of the flint, pottery and beadwork of the American Indian can be seen alongside the glass, metal and gunsmithing efforts of our forefathers. If visitors carefully study the labeled displays, there are many surprises about the depth of our local history to be uncovered.

THE PIONEER Museum is embarking in a new direction by offering miniature exhibitions which change periodically. The rotating displays will range from works completed by contemporary Kentucky craftsmen to selections from the permanent collections currently in storeage.

Purpose of the exhibits is to offer for public viewing well crafted items which are aesthetically pleasing and interesting. Another focus will be the educational aspect addressing the questions of how and why these items were created.

The first exhibition runs through Labor Day and features two colonial crafts, weaving and basketry. Dorothy Savage, a handweaver from Lexington, produces miniature replicas of traditional coverlet patterns. They represent the full sized 80" x 90" colonial coverlets woven from circa 1670-1850.

Ann Jeremiah has five different styles of split oak baskets on exhibit. Ann is a craftsperson from nearby Mays Lick, and exhibits extensively throughout this region.

Lenore Potter from Asbury College in Wilmore has an example of the twin bottom egg basket common to this area.

Schools must file performance report

A plan for implementing new legislation that calls for greater accountability in the academic performance of local school districts has been approved by an advisory committee.

The Advisory Committee on Senate Bill 202 also designated the information to be presented by local school districts in an annual performance report required under the bill approved by the 1984 General Assembly.

The committee's recommendations will go to the State Board of Education for approval at its meeting on Sept. 11.

Dr. Dan Brandon, deputy superintendent of public instruction and chairman of the committee, said local school districts will be given a draft copy of the requirements for the annual performance report so they can begin assembling the information called for.

THE LEGISLATION calls for submission of the performance reports to the state Department of Education by Sept. 15 of each year and publication in local newspapers by Oct. 1.

The implementation plan provides specific standards by which a local school district can be determined to be academically deficient, Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice Mc-Donald said.

"The members of this committee have done an outstanding job in determining the most important indicators of educational quality," she said.

"They have also provided a clear-cut guide for any district that is found lacking in some aspect of its education program to know what is needed and how to go about attaining it."

The performance reports will include data on academic achievement, enrollment, attendance, dropouts, pupil-teacher ratio, staff qualifications, expenses per pupil, revenue, transportation cost, assessed valuation per pupil and other factors.

WHEN DEFICIENCIES are identified for a district, the district will be required to submit a plan for correcting them, under the proposed regulations. Technical assistance would be provided by the state Department of Education.

Any district that failed to make satisfactory progress toward correcting deficiencies would be subject to direct management intervention by the State Board of Education, under the proposed regulations.

Satisfactory progress is defined as "the district's compliance with and adherence to the time lines established in the (district's) approved Master Educational Improvement Plan."

THE LEGISLATION also provides that, if a district fails to correct its deficiencies after all those steps have been taken, local board members or district officials could be subject to removal from office.

Under the new regulations, each district will be required to submit a Master Educational Improvement Plan to the Department of Education. This plan will replace other performance reports the districts have previously been required to submit.

Education, local school officials will select the three percent of all applications to be verified. Those families will be notified and asked to provide documentation of income. This documentation may be in the form of a paycheck stub, a letter from an employer stating gross income, letters of benefit or checks from public assistance programs such as AFDC, unemployment compensation or disability, letters of benefits or check stubs for Social Security, benefit notices for worker's compensation or veterans' benefits, court decree showing alimony/child support or the most recent copy of an alimony/child support check; benefit notice or check stub for retirement benefits, or for self-employed people, a quarterly estimate of income submitted to the IRS or a copy of the previous year's tax return if the income shown is representative of current income.

According to Guthrie, "We have no choice but to carry out this procedure. Our participation in the free and reduced price meal program requires us to do this and failure to do so will result in the loss of this program to our schools. Without this program and the price support it provides to all students, our meal prices would have to be much higher than they are now. A prompt reply to our request for documentation of income will insure that we can continue to provide meals at the current price level."

PARENTS are also reminded that each child enrolled in the Nicholas County Schools must have on file in the school office a health record which include an immunization certificate, a verification of a TB skin test, and a physical form. Each student's record must also contain a verification of birth. Parents of students enrolling in the Nicholas County Schools for the first time should insure that these documents are on file.

Parents of students attending either session of kindergarten this year will have orientation Aug. 23, 9 a.m. in the elementary school gymnasium. Both a parent and the kindergarten student should attend this orientation session.

Students enrolling in Nicholas County Schools for the first time should report to the principal's office on the first day of school to enroll and receive their schedule.

CALENDAR for the 1984-85 school year: Opening day, Aug. 30; in-service days, Aug. 31, 22; students registration, Aug. 22; holiday, Sept. 3; CKEA, Oct. 5; holiday, Oct. 8; holiday, Nov. 22, 23; holiday, Dec. 24-Jan. 1; holiday, Jan. 18; in-service day, Feb. 15; in-service day, March 15; spring break, April 8-12; professional day, May 22; last day of school, May 23.

The calendar may be amended as a result of school days missed due to inclement weather. The public will be notified of changes through The Mercury and announcements in the schools.

Webworms infesting trees

Homeowners and timberland owners are becoming aware of the fall webworm infesting their trees. This caterpillar makes itself conspicuous by covering the ends of branches with large, unsightly webs. It attacks more than 100 tree species, but its major hosts in Kentucky are ash, black walnut, oak, hickory, persimmon, pecan, cherry and sourwood.

The pest itself is a caterpillar up to one inch long, pale yellow, green or brown, and covered with long gray hairs. There is a broad, dusky stripe down each side. They usually don't eat the entire leaf, but skeletonize them to the extent that the leaves curl, dry up and die.

One method of control is to simply prune the webs from the trees and destroy them by burning. Do not burn the nests while on the trees, as this can seriously damage the tree. Pesticides that are effective include Sevin, Dursban and Dylox. Spray the webs when they are first visible. Remember to read and follow all label directions when using pesticides to avoid environmental and personal injury.

For other insect and disease advice or forest management assistance, contact the Kentucky Division of Forestry, 749 West First Street, Morehead 40351, or call 784-7504.

Driver training certification

Donald G. Elder, superintendent of schools, displays the certificate he received for Driver Education Training Course at Eastern Kentucky University. The three-day course consisted of all phases of driver training and certifies Elder to conduct training for Nicholas County bus drivers. Beginning in 1985 all bus drivers must complete the course.
