Eye Openers
By Dr. Robert F. Pretzsch, Optometrist
Dumb or Shortsighted?

President Reagan recently told a group of students that his bad eyesight made him think that he was dumb when he attended high school—because he had trouble seeing the blackboard. How sad!

Q. Is the eye test a child receives at school adequate to determine whether or not he sees well?

A. Usually not. Generally the classroom teacher checks each child's vision by putting up a Snellen Chart—the one with the big E—at the front of the room. Each child is asked to read the 20/20 line from a distance of 20 feet.

Only the ability to see a row of letters from a distance is being measured. If your child's name is towards the end of the alphabet, he's probably memorized the "passing line" by the time it is his turn. He may not even be seeing the distant letters clearly, yet no one else will know. Even if he can see the letters, this test does not indicate how much he has to strain to see.

This testing totally ignores your child's near vision (imperative for reading!), eye coordination, ability to focus on objects, depth perception, and astigmatism. Problems in any of these visual areas can make your child appear dumb even if he is really very, very smart.

LAWRENCE WELK CHRISTMAS SPECIAL

On Saturday, December 22 at 8 p.m., WLEX-TV will present "Home for Christmas" with Lawrence Welk and his Musical Family in a brand new Christmas special, their first since 1981.

This special features visits to the homes of various Welk stars. And the show abounds in everything home and Christmas mean — love, warmth, fun, tears, laughter, music and children.

LIABILITY INSURANCE PROOF REQUIRED WHEN RENEWING

Beginning Jan. 1, 1985, Kentuckians seeking renewal of motor vehicle registration will be required to submit proof of liability insurance to their county clerk.

In an effort to effectively enforce the Kentucky mandatory insurance code, House Bill 42 will replace the present stickers with a more efficient identification card system.

In accordance with the new bill, authorized insurers will issue policyholders identification cards annually, in duplicate, on the policy's anniversary date. Upon renewal of vehicle registration, one card is to be given to the county clerk and the other is to be retained by the policyholder.

Insurers are required by the new law to report cancellations and nonrenewals of policies to the Department of Vehicle Regulation. The information will be placed in the automated vehicle information system, which in turn will generate letters to the invalid policyholders.

These letters will notify the policyholders that they have 10 days to present proof of insurance to the county clerk. If proof is not presented within the time limit, the Department of Vehicle Regulation will notify the county attorney to begin prosecution.

Alternate methods of proving motor vehicle insurance include: (1) a certificate of insurance issued by a general lines insurance agent licensed by Kentucky; the certificate shall be on a form prescribed by the commissioner; (2) an insurance contract with a declaration page attached showing that the policy is in effect at the time the motor vehicle is being registered; and (3) when the owner of the motor vehicle is serving in the armed forces outside Kentucky, an affidavit by the personal marshal of the base where such person is stationed stating that the motor vehicle in question is covered by an automobile liability insurance policy.

Gifts for the sportsman

Looking for a last minute Christmas present for Uncle Harry, the quail hunter, or Brother Bob the bass fisherman? A 1985 hunting or fishing license might be just the thing.

All Kentucky sport licenses expire at midnight, Dec. 31, so the sportsman will need a new one before his first trip of the new year. There isn't any problem about size or color and the price is reasonable.

A resident hunting or fishing license costs $7.50 each, and a combination license at $14 allows the sportsman to both hunt and fish for a full year. While youngsters under 16 years old do not need a fishing license, young hunters must have a junior hunting license ($4) issued with parental permission.

THE ONLY persons who don't need licenses are Kentucky residents who have reached their 65th birthday, landowners or tenants and members of their immediate families hunting or fishing on lands which they own or reside, resident servicemen on furlough or four or more days who hunt or fish in the county where they lived before joining the service and veterans with military-related total and permanent disabilities.

If Uncle Harry lives out of state, you'll have to spend $15 for an annual nonresident fishing license or $40 for a year-round hunting license. Short term licenses are available for non-residents, a three-day fishing license costs $5 and a 5-day fishing permit, $6.50. A three-day small game hunting license is $14.50, but you'll valid for deer or turkey hunting.

SINCE THE FUNDS from license sales are used to finance the operations of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, that Christmas present to Brother Bob is a gift to fish and wildlife conservation in Kentucky. The money spent for licenses will ultimately be used for scientific research and management, stocking, law enforcement and education.

And when a sportsman buys hunting or fishing equipment, he also benefits conservation by an 11 percent federal excise tax on such goods. The funds from this tax are prorated back to the states and used for approved fish and wildlife research or management projects or for wildlife land acquisition.

ANOTHER excellent and inexpensive Christmas gift idea is a subscription to Happy Hunting ground, the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources' bimonthly magazine about hunting, fishing and conservation in Kentucky. A year's subscription costs only $3 for six issues and may be obtained by sending payment along with the name and complete address of the recipient to Happy Hunting Ground, Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601. If you'd like, a card announcing the gift subscription will be sent in your name.

If you have a stamp collector on your list, a 1985 trout stamp might make a suitable gift. Although these stamps have been around for a while, the new one is the second to feature the reproduction of an original work of art, and the design will change annually. These stamps could be worth much more than their $3.50 purchase price in a few years.

KFB approves lower price supports, lottery

Kentucky Farm Bureau convention delegates have adopted a series of far-reaching proposals to change the burley tobacco price support program, including the conditional offer to accept lower price supports if tobacco imports are curtailed.

The delegates, representing county Farm Bureaus from across Kentucky, accepted nine of 10 proposals recommended by the Kentucky Farm Bureau Resolutions Committee to deal with a worsening tobacco economy. They refused to go along with a 10th recommendation, however, which would have asked that leasing privileges be terminated and quotas legalized.

Several of the proposals seek to deal with the illegal tobacco weed market, which has escalated in recent years as manufacturers have looked to overseas producers for an increasing share of their leaf supplies.

AMONG THE import-related policies are requests for the:

— Imposition of import quotas on burley from nations where the governments, or U.S. tobacco companies, subsidize tobacco growers.

— Limitation of total burley imports to 10 percent of U.S. burley production.

— Negotiation of trade agreements that would prohibit burley imports from countries that do not permit U.S. tobacco to be imported.

Other parts of the new plan are recommendations that:

— Limit farmers' liability under the no-net cost program to the first 50 million pounds of tobacco in the farmer cooperatives' pool. Current holdings total more than 300 million pounds, and farmers pay a nine-cent-per-pound assessment on their tobacco crops to insure against losses on the surplus leaf.

— Farmers be allowed to sell only their poundage allotments, with no provision for 10 percent overmarketing as currently permitted.

— The 1983 burley crop supplies now in the pool be taken out of the no-net cost program, with responsibility for any losses on the sale of the leaf transferred to the Commodity Credit Corporation. Much of that year's crop was drought-damaged, and buyers have been reluctant to purchase that portion of pool stocks.

THE PROVISION relating to lower support prices tied the reductions to corresponding decreases in the nine-cent no-net cost assessment. The delegates felt that if support prices were reached, they would consider reducing supports by two cents per pound and the nine-cent reduction in the assessment. They also asked that the no-net cost fund be capped at $100 million, approximately the level that is expected in the fund at the end of the current marketing season.

Under the proposed formula, support prices could be cut a maximum of 18 cents if the assessment was eliminated.

IN OTHER policy action, the Farm Bureau delegates approved a resolution supporting a state lottery, as an alternative to higher taxes, if additional revenue is needed in Frankfort. Proceeds from the lottery, they said, should be used to replace the state inheritance tax, with remaining funds earmarked for education and rural roads.

The delegates also decided to support changing two state offices from elective to appointive status. They said the change should apply to the superintendent of public instruction and the commissioner of agriculture.

Coping with depression during holidays

"Happy holidays" is an expression heard quite often this time of year, but for someone who is depressed, the holidays can be a most unhappy time of year.

Help for Kentuckians trying to cope with holiday depression and stress is available at any of the 14 comprehensive care centers operated by the state's regional mental health/mental retardation offices or through several private agencies statewide.

"Depression can be magnified during the holiday season," said Dennis Boyd, commissioner of the Department for Mental Health and Mental Retardation, "because everyone else is having fun, giving gifts and going to parties. Some people can't function on that level."

Several things can trigger a severe depression, noted Boyd, such as the pressure of mounting bills, not being able to give the gifts we would like, family problems or the loss of a job. Losing a loved one can also cause severe depression.

"Others are socializing and the reality of someone's absence is magnified," he said. "It can be a traumatic situation to lose a long-time partner suddenly around this time of year."

Although it seems unlikely, partying can help compound the problem.

"Around Christmas, we tend to party too much," Boyd pointed out. "Alcohol consumption tends to increase around Christmas with the parties and festivities and alcohol is a depressant that can make a bad situation even worse."

For someone who recognizes they have a problem with depression, he suggests they do something to combat it, such as changing their routine or getting involved with a worthwhile project.

"Go to lunch or a movie with someone or help with a Christmas play," suggested Boyd, "or help a friend decorate a tree or house. Do something to keep occupied."

Help is available through several private agencies or through any of the comprehensive care centers located throughout the state. These centers are operated by the regional mental health-retardation offices and have 24-hour crisis hotlines manned by personnel who can assist the caller in getting immediate help.
