8th grade Jackets 15 and counting

Fifteen in a row and counting. That's the status of the Nicholas County eighth grade basketball team.

The Bluejackets disposed of Paris, Conkwright and Scott County last week to remain atop the Blue Grass Conference with a perfect 15-0 record.

Nicholas County jumped on Paris in a hurry, leading 9-2 after the first period and 26-4 at intermission. The Jackets were up by 17 at 28-11 after three quarters and coasted to a 37-25 win.

Conkwright proved to be tougher the second time around as the Cougars made things rough on the Jackets for most of the game, but Nicholas County's experience paid off to the tune of a 39-25 victory. Nicholas had handled Conkwright easily a week ago in Winchester and actually held them scoreless for the first nine-plus minutes of the game.

The Bluejackets defeated Scott County Monday by a score of 45-30. Nicholas County shot poorly, but went to the boards well and out-rebounded the visiting Cardinals 41-26.

This fine team has only two regular season games remaining. They will travel to Georgetown for a 6:00 encounter on Thursday, Feb. 9, and host Woodford County Monday, Feb. 13. A win over either opponent will clinch the division championship for Nicholas County Elementary School.

Nicholas 51, Bourbon 70

The Jackets played the Bourbon County Colonels Friday night at the high school.

The Jackets gave the Colonels a fight for the lead, but the Colonels were able to come out ahead in each quarter: first 17-15; second 34-30; third 49-46. During the last quarter the Colonels surged far ahead and won the game 70-51.

Individual stats: Anderson FG, 7-20; Young 2-4; Robinson 3-4, FT 3-6; Wells 2-5, 2-2; McGuffey, FG, 6-9; Ledford 3-4, Coldiron 1-2, Ramsey 1-2.

Nicholas 56, Danville 77

The Jackets traveled to Bo-le County Saturday to play the Danville Admirals in the CKC finals.

The Jackets played extremely well in the first half and were able to end the first two quarters ahead: first 15-14, half 36-31.

The Admirals gained the lead in the third quarter 56-43, and won the game 77-56.

Individual stats: Anderson 8-22, 4-4; Young 2-4, 4-4; Robinson 5-8, 3-4; Wells 1-3, 2-2; McGuffey 1-4, 2-2; Ledford, PT, 2-2; Coldiron, FG, 2-2; Ramsey, FG, 1-1.

CCC

cleared his voice, and said, "As you know by now, of course, my name is Harry Putnam, but at all times, when speaking to me or referring to me, you will call me Mister. I am not in the Army. I am what is known as a D A Civilian. The initials D A stand for Department of the Army, so I am a civilian working for the Army. While I am on the base I am in charge of you. I have complete control of you. I am responsible for you, which adds up to the fact that I am your boss.

"When I am not here Mr. Red Arnold, who is senior leader in your CCC organization, has the same authority delegated to him. Now I want that fully understood."

(Well, well, another Tully Crump with a tie on, I thought.) After a short pause to catch his breath, the great man continued. "We have a little less than 10 weeks to make radio operators of you. The impossible may take a little longer, what do you think, Mr. Arnold?"

"I think it's time we got down to the nitty-gritty of finding out," said the redhead. Now him, I thought, I could learn to like.

I do not think this was the kind of answer Mister Putnam expected, for he said, "As you like, Red." (I noticed Putnam suddenly dropped the Mr. by calling him Red and by doing so, put him back in the CCC, purposely). Red Arnold noticed it too. I could tell by the slight coloring of his face. But I felt that "Red could take care of Red" alright.

"Not as an apology but as a fact, I cannot be here to do the orientation of you for I have a very important appointment with the post commander to discuss some points of policy of you students. I am assuming that none of you know anything about being a radio operator, but I think that Red Arnold can take care of this basic orientation without me." In so passing the buck, he left the building, showing us the type of leadership we could expect from Mister Putnam.

Red Arnold said with a nervous little laugh, "I wish right now I was back in Hattiesburg, Miss.," and with the saying, established a good rapport with us all.

He then went into the theory of learning the International Morse Code and the difference between it and the Morse Code used by telegraphers that we probably had heard in railway depots. He explained, "The difference is that in telegraphy where you have a flat clicking sound and you read the space between the so called clicks, in the International Morse, you have a more musical sound and you read the sound itself."

"Don't try to copy down what I have been saying. The best way to learn this is to hear it. To this sending key in front of me, here on the table, I have hooked up a small amplifier and I will talk and demonstrate. Please pay close attention. The first sound you will hear is a dot. We pronounce it 'Dit'. He made the sound, then several of these dits. The next sound you hear is a dash, pronounced 'Dah' and he ran off a string of dah's. These dits and dash when put together form letters of the alphabet to form words. For example a 'dit dah' forms an A and then he ran off a string of 'dit dahs'.

This is very confusing to you at-the present time, but one day it will not be, and one day everything will fall into place, believe me. I know exactly what's running through your minds right now. You are thinking 'this will be so slow how could I ever send or receive a message if I have to stop and try to think, was that a dit or a dah, and say I figure that was a dit dah, now let's see, dit dah, oh yes, that is an A, but it has taken me more than two minutes to do one letter. (He was a mind reader as well) and now I will confuse

Grouse hunters get extra day

Kentucky's grouse hunters will get a bonus this year — an extra day of hunting. The grouse season officially runs through the last day of February, but since 1984 is a leap year, Feb. 29 gives dedicated hunters one more day to exercise their dogs and their legs climbing up and down East Kentucky hills.

Quail and rabbit seasons close Feb. 12, leaving grouse as the only upland game that can be hunted through the end of the month. Many experienced grouse hunters say their best hunting occurs late in the season, so there's still plenty of time to get in a hunt or two before March — and spring fishing — rolls around.

In Kentucky, don't look for grouse west of the Daniel Boone National Forest. Although their range was probably once more extensive, grouse are confined now to the rugged, mountainous sections of Eastern Kentucky, where it seems to be holding its own quite well.

Which is more than can be said for the "flatland" hunter who tackles these hills without being in good physical shape. He soon discovers why grouse hunting isn't more popular than it is in Kentucky — it's too much like hard work.

But if you enjoy hiking up and down hills, grouse hunting might just be the sport for you. About the only other equipment you'll need is a short-barreled, fast-pointing shotgun and some shells loaded with 7½ shot.

While a dog is a big help both in locating grouse and in retrieving downed birds, many hunters manage to get along fine without dogs. The trick is to know where to look for grouse, then go in and flush them out.

One key to locating grouse is finding areas with preferred grouse food — wild grapes, acorns, beechnuts, sumac berries and small green plants such as greenbriar leaves or the buds of maple and birch trees.

Abandoned farms and old strip mine sites that have plenty of second-growth cover are good places to flush grouse. These birds seem to prefer the cooler, shady sides of the mountains and will move up or down depending on weather conditions.

When you do flush a grouse, be prepared to shoot quickly, since they seem to have a talent for putting a tree between themselves and the hunter or quickly dropping over a bank. They will also run on the ground much more than a quail will, but at other times they'll hold until you almost step on them.

Don't expect a lot of action on a grouse hunt, either. Even expert hunters seldom reach their daily limit of four birds, but like muskie fishermen, they keep at it.

And one final tip: if you're hunting in a party, make sure everyone is wearing some kind of hunter orange garment — it makes it much easier to spot the other members of your party and could help avoid an accident.

UK ISSUES ADMISSIONS DEADLINE REMINDER

Feb. 15 is the priority deadline for freshman admission to the University of Kentucky for the fall semester of 1984, says George Gaddie, associate dean of admissions.

After that date, Gaddie says, only students meeting the criteria for automatic acceptance to UK will be admitted.

Students who are currently in the delayed consideration pool can expect to receive an admissions decision after March 15.
