Child's toy chest is potential hazard

Parents who take great care to protect their pre-acharers from household dangers like the stove or the furniture probably may be overlooking another potential hazard: the toy chest in the child's own room.

A recent survey coordinated by the state's Cabinet for Human Resources indicates that some toy chests with hinged lids do not comply with the industry's own safety standards and can cause serious injury to small children.

The survey was conducted by the cabinet's Radiation and Consumer Product Safety Branch at the request of the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission. Branch manager Edsel Moore said the commission initiated the safety check in several states because from 1974 to mid-1963 it recorded 21 deaths of small children who were strangled when hinged lids fell on them as they were looking into the open toy chests. None of the deaths occurred in Kentucky.
Commission records also show two cases of permanent brain damage and one case of partial paralysis and blindness because of accidents involving toy chests. Moore said there are probably many unreported cases of one.

Oaks Club report
by The Green Reporter
The Oaks group had a very busy month of December. On Dec. 15, we performed at the Carvers Country Club for Kentucky Textiles Pioneer Club's Christmas Party. On Dec. 16, we performed at the Syracuse Hills Apartments Christmas supper, which we had our own party at the old depot. The evening consisted of a potluck supper, and exchanging of gifts, and closed with the Oaks performing for their parents and guests.
The group thoroughly enjoyed participating in the Christmas parties both here at home and in Paris. The theme for our first entry was "Christmas Celebrated in Song."
On Friday, Jan. 8, we will be having a private skating party at Ken-Dar's, at the old arena.

Produce Specials
The Oaks are planning several activities in the coming months, one of which will be a bake sale when the weather improves.
All of us in the Oaks hope everyone had a Merry Christmas, and we wish everyone a happy New Year.

serious injuries such as mangled or broken fingers.
In Kentucky, 12 retail outlets were checked in 14 towns and cities. Surveys examined 41 items labeled, sold or used as toy chests. Only 14 had lids that did not fall from any open position. Fifteen lids fell no more than a half-inch from various open positions. None of the chests had lids that dropped beyond the allowable distance from open positions and so are considered potentially dangerous to children.
"The trouble comes when a toddler pushes the lid up and leaves over the front edge of the toy chest to an inside," said Moore. "The child then falls down if the lid lands for a boy. If there is no safeguard to hold the lid in position, it falls and traps the child across the neck or chest. A child who cannot or does not push the lid back up is badly in trouble or is deprived of oxygen long enough to cause permanent damage."
