Pumphrey ranks high on coaching 'Win List'

People

The Win List for Kentucky high school football coaches grew by three last week, to 33 with the addition of Johnny Meiman of Louisville St. Xavier and duPont Manual, Ralph Horning (now retired) at Union County/Sturgis and Ben Pumphrey at Nicholas County (Carlisle).

It ni Pumphrey's arrival on "the List" that is most gratifying today. One of the fine gentleman in all of sports, the 60-year--old coach at Nicholas County High is No. 16 overall and ninth among active coaches. He will retire after the 1984 season.

Pumphrey's record came my way in a letter from Jim Boaz of Buffalo in LaRue County. "Ben (Pukey) is a swell guy," Boaz wrote. "I've known him for years. I was a few years ahead of him at Carlisle (high school)."

When contacted by telephone late last week, Pumphrey deflected credit for his distinguished record, saying, "I've been extremely fortunate to have had some awfully good players."

He declined to single out individual players, saying, "Every sub on the bench contributed to my record. They all came and worked hard in July, August and through the season just as much as the all-staters did. Every one of those victories was a team victory."

Pumphrey remembered Boaz too. "I was just a kid when he played, but Jim was on the 1935 Carlisle team that went undefeated and untied and he was an excellent player too, played tackle."

Pumphrey's next comment was the best. "Jim Boaz is one of those people who always had his priorities in the right place. It was always team first, ahead of any individual things. He calls me about twice a year. Jim's the finest fan anybody ever had."

Pumphrey's 1983 Nicholas County team, called the Bluejackets, finished 8-4, losing to Beechwood (twice, Woodford County and Paris). NCHS lost eight seniors from that club and could be a Class A power this autumn.

Joe Lobs don't know about that." the wiley Pumphrey chuckled. "We have to scrimp to get boys for the team you know. Many of them have to work on the farm. But anyway, we're not all that good and we're not smart, but somehow we manage to win a few games."

Comment: If the Bluejackets manage say, an 8-2 season, it could push the "old coach" into 12th place on the Win List. Also, Ben Pumphrey fans will have an interest in how Mayfield does this season. Cardinals' coach Jack Morris is two wins ahead of the Nicholas County coach, 146 to 144.

Elsewhere

Tom Payne. The first black player to sign with the University of Kentucky has now turned to professional boxing. Before his four round KO over Victor Soriana last month in Los Angeles, the 7-2, 286-pounder heard his attorney tell a Los Angeles Herald reporter that Payne's conviction and 11-year prison sentence for rape was a miscarriage of justice.

"On the evidence I'm aware of, he was railroaded," said attorney Cary Medill, who said he had examined trial transcripts. "I think the fact that he was the first black to play at Kentucky may have played a part in it. That probably didn't make too many people happy."

Medill added, "If it (the trial) in California, he never would have been convicted. I doubt a case would have even been filed. Butthey do things differently in the south, at least they did back then."

Comment: Someone help me. I cannot see how Payne's being the first black basketball player at UK could influence a jury in Atlanta, Georgia.

More basketball

■ Waiting... That's former UK stars Sam Bowie and Melvin Turpin. According to a UK spokesman both big men are waiting for their agents to present "some numbers" on contract offers from Portland and Cleveland respectively.

"They're playing in pick up games," said the UK man. "Waiting around."

Jim Master and Dicky Beal were in Atlanta last week for the Hawks' mini-tryout camp. And Tom Heitz, drafted by the Indiana Pacers, is considering going to tryout camp as well Heitz has a "position" on the Chicago Board of Trade.

■ Other UK basketball news: Winston Bennett was named to the all-tournament team in something called the Jones Cup tourney in Taiwan. Freshmen-to-be Ed Davender, Cedric Jenkins and Richard Madison arrived at Lexington two weeks ago and are working summer jobs. Another freshman expected later this month from West Germany and Robert Lucke, currently playing on a touring AAU team sponsored by Pepsi Cola, likewise.

■ Quite a lineup for the second annual Western Airlines-Chaminade basketball classic Dec. 22 and 25 in Honolulu.

Coach Denny Crum's University of Louisville Cardinals will make the trip again this winter (somebody has to do it) and play the host fellows' words on Dec. 22. SMU and Oklahoma will open the tourney.

On Christmas Day Louisville will play in the "Big Bucks for Television" game against Oklahoma. Should be quite a treat.

CFA/Louisville

In the July edition of Sweet ARD editor John Crawley presents an excellent and thorough column called CFA pays U of L football among the nation's elite programs. But I have a problem with one point Crawley makes. He offers the proposition that Louisville's inclusion in the recently legitimatized College Football Association (CFA) means automatically that U of L is one of America's elite football programs.

Well, coach Bob Weber is a nice man who works very hard. But in fact Louisville football is not among America's best programs. Not remotely it seems to me, the CFA is investing in U of L's television potential and future schedules. Future foes include Houston, Miami, Fla. Syracuse, West Virgina, Eastern Kentucky and (trumpets please, John) Kentucky.

But late in his column, Crawley gets away from hometown and back to reality, concluding that "U of L's admission into the CFA is a big feather in the Louisville football cap ... the Cards will have to become competitive against these types of teams in order to be successful."

Yes indeed, to qualify for (elite) television dates (and money therefrom), U of L faces the same obstacle all other money conscious Division I schools do: Win!■

Sewage disposal systems require licensed plumber

Nicholas Countians and other Kentuckians wanting a septic tank or other on-site sewage disposal system installed must meet additional requirements and possibly pay additional costs. The changes are a result of House Bill 677, adopted into law by the 1984 Kentucky General Assembly, effective July 13.

Irving Bell, director of Consumer Health Protection for the Cabinet for Human Resources, said the new law restricts who may receive the permit necessary for installation of on-site sewage disposal systems. "Previously anyone could receive a permit from the local health department as long as the final disposal system was inspected and was in compliance with state standards," he said.

"In general the majority of this work was being done by backhoe operators or other non-licensed personnel. While we would have desired some uniform training in the requirements for installation, our field inspectors reported no widespread problems with this approach."

The 1984 General Assembly approved House Bill 677, requiring that work relating to on-site sewage disposal systems must be done by a licensed plumber. "A building contractor now must employ a licensed plumber to install a septic tank or other system. Local health department staff may only issue the required permits to licensed plumbers, and the work of actually installing the system must be done by the plumbers themselves," Bell said.

Based on a legal opinion from the cabinet's legal counsel, homeowners may obtain the necessary permit for work to be done by the homeowner on a residence he or she occupies. Bell explained, "A homeowner can get a permit to install his or her own septic tank. However, all work with the exception of backhoe digging must be done by the resident. Inflallation by anyone else would require issuance of the permit to a licensed plumber."

Bell said that his office recently has completed publication of a homeowners guide and a separate technical manual relating to the requirements on installation of on-site sewage disposal systems. Copies are available through county and district health departments.

In the past year the local health departments issued 5,816 permits for the construction, installation and alteration of on-site sewage disposal systems in Kentucky.

Bell changes bill format

South Central Bell customers in Nicholas County should find their bills easier to understand this month.

"A new summary page and changes in how the charges are listed should make telephone bills easier to read," said Carl Renz, district manager. "I know the bills with so many pages haven't been a hit with customers, but we're working with customers to make improvements."

"Competition and more choices for our customers have complicated the bill," Renz said. "The days of one phone company and one simple phone bill are gone."

Since the breakup of the Bell System on Jan. 1, 1984, phone bills sent out by South Central Bell have included several companies' charges. Charges for leased AT&T telephone equipment and AT&T long-distance calls, for example, are included in the same bill with South Central Bell charges.

ACCORDING TO Renz, the new bill has a summary page that shows the current charges from each company and the amount the customer owes.

The summary page follows the address page, which lists the total amount the customer owes.

"From time to time some customers may also find a For Your Information page near the front of their bill," Renz said.

RENZ ALSO NOTED several of the changes that have taken place and charges involved when you dial "9" and ask the operator to dial a local call for you, verify that a telephone number is working, or interrupt a call. There is a 60 cent charge when you ask a South Central Bell operator to dial a call you could have dialed yourself. Renz did say that there are exceptions for service problems, emergency calls and calls made by disabled persons who are unable to dial their own calls.

A 95 cent charge will apply if you ask the operator to verify the status of a local line and the line is found to be in use. You won't be charged if there is trouble on the line, or for emergency calls to or from an emergency number.

There is also a $1.40 charge if you ask the operator to interrupt a phone call so you can get through. If an operator verifies the line and interrupts the call on the same request, only the interruption charge applies. Renz stated that there would be no charge for emergency calls and calls to or from an emergency number of if there is trouble on the line.

"MY FIRST SUGGESTION is to look up the local telephone number in your directory before you call for directory assistance. Remember, you get only the first five free during the month.

"If you are like me and make a number of long-distance calls, it will pay you to jot down those number for future use. This will save both time and money," Hills said.

Also, residential and business customers wanting to curb their directory assistance costs may obtain one additional Kentucky directory (Bell or Non-Bell) free by calling South Central Bell's billing department, 502-569-4400 for businesses, 606-743-5011 for residential customers.
