Parthenood class

The parthenood class at NCIS participated in a project for a weekend to give them insight into the time and responsibilities required to parent a baby. The "babies" were eggs which were "delivered" to the class on Friday. They were given instructions about the project at that time and students could "dress" them. Each student was given "FIV" they could use for five hours of babysitting, otherwise they would be totally responsible for their "child" for the weekend. A lady was kept of the care and time spent with their child. On Monday in class the students returned their "eggs" and evaluated their feelings and learnings from this project. They felt that the experience was fun but babies do upset your lifestyle and require much time to care for. One student said the child had a baby right now. Beware of hypothermia danger

By John Wilson

Deep and wide winter weather has been slow withdrawing, but it is not yet safe to assume that the dangers associated with cold weather are leaving with it. The probability of getting into serious or even fatal trouble while outdoors in late winter and early spring is as great, if not greater, now than in the dead of winter.

Many people will be out fishing, camping, or hiking in the days warm. Many of them may not be prepared for sudden changes in the weather. A camped boat, even on a "Shoogee" may, may a fisherman into a soggy water, where he can remain conscious for less than half an hour.

WET CLOTHING (either from rain, dunking or from a sudden rain) coupled with strong winds can lower the body's internal temperature to dangerous levels, even when air temperatures are in the 50s. Most garments available in the 50s are not designed to insulate when wet and wet and wind increase exposure, which can even further cooling effect of the wind.

While this lowering of the body's core temperature (called hypothermia) isn't technically the same as "freezing to death," the results can be just as permanent. A drop of only two degrees from the normal 98.6 degrees can bring on the first symptoms of hypothermia — uncontrollable shivering, followed by loss of mental powers, muscular rigidity, unconsciousness, and if internal temperatures drop, death.

It is particularly alert during cool-weather outings. Watch for both yourself and your companions. Shivering, slurred speech, and irrational behavior — like the sufferer was dragged or struck — are warnings. The TREATMENT for hypothermia is to reverse the body's heat loss. In other words, remember your by-standers, getting the victim into a warm place (a heated building or a warm blanket with another person) as gently as possible.

If severe cases, however, it's important that the head, shoulders, chest, abdomen and groin be warmed first. If the arms and legs are warmed too rapidly, blood is drawn away from the body's core and increased internal cooling, called "afterdrop" can occur, sending the victim into some times fatal shock.

After initial treatment, be sure to seek professional aid. And don't rely on the victim's own assessment of his condition — remember that a loss of reasoning power is one of the first effects of hypothermia. If you're going to be around water at any time this winter, be sure to take a hypothermia course.

Anyone caught on the property of the Estate of Margaret A. Brierly, putting wood or doing any other damage will be arrested. If you're going to be around water at any time this winter, be sure to take a hypothermia course.

MILK DIVERSION PROGRAM

URNS LOW RESPONSE

Many dairy producers across the country, including the members of Milk Marketing Inc., have opted out of the program. The program is a voluntary program of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's milk diversion program. According to USDA statistics, 37,300 producers signed up for the 12-month program. The sign up could account for a total production of 7.1 billion pounds in 1984, or about 1.5 percent of the milk produced in the United States.

According to Milk Marketing Inc., the number of participating producers is low because of basic factors in the existing legislation and tight USDA regulations.

Barber named coordinator for MSU center

Garry Barker has been named coordinator for the new center for the study of the history of the state of Kentucky. Barker, a Fleming County native, received his bachelor's degree in English from Berea College in 1965. He has been employed by such regional institutions as the Southern Historical Foundation, Berea College, and the University of Kentucky. Barker is currently working for the Kentucky Historical Society in Lexington.

URNS LOW RESPONSE

Many dairy producers across the country, including the members of Milk Marketing Inc., have opted out of the program. The program is a voluntary program of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's milk diversion program. According to USDA statistics, 37,300 producers signed up for the 12-month program. The sign up could account for a total production of 7.1 billion pounds in 1984, or about 1.5 percent of the milk produced in the United States.

According to Milk Marketing Inc., the number of participating producers is low because of basic factors in the existing legislation and tight USDA regulations.

Barber named coordinator for MSU center

Garry Barker has been named coordinator for the new center for the study of the history of the state of Kentucky. Barker, a Fleming County native, received his bachelor's degree in English from Berea College in 1965. He has been employed by such regional institutions as the Southern Historical Foundation, Berea College, and the University of Kentucky. Barker is currently working for the Kentucky Historical Society in Lexington.
