Wanted: A good education

By Alice McDermold
Supervisor of Public Instruction

What do we want for our children?
THIS REPRESENTS a fundamental change in public attitudes and it is a change from the 1950s or the 1960s. They fear that their sons and daughters will lack themselves in a decent quality of life. They fear that their sons and daughters will lack themselves in a decent quality of life. They fear that their sons and daughters will lack themselves in a decent quality of life.

Interest rates and taxes went up and business cost back on management and administration. The cost of government went up more than revenues and federal responsibilities were shifted to the states.

Ready hard-working people who never expected to be laid off feel the bite of unemployment. They sought replacement jobs but the traditional kinds of jobs were no longer available and they did not have the skills to qualify for the technical jobs that were.

Ship of state belt tightened

By S.C. Van Curen

Frankfort — The ship of state was tightened on a bit last week when a revised Senate-approved reorganization bill was introduced in the House committee.

The original Senate bill was designed to change one of former Gov. John Y. Brown Jr.'s agency shifts effected by one of his many executive orders.

Revolutionary fervor

Some time ago, out of deference to supposed sensitivities of American Indians, the University of Massachusetts stopped calling sports teams the Redmen and redesignated them the Minutemen. But a student group calling itself the Freedomers recently launched an attack on the new nickname, saying

Confounding caucuses

All of these circles called primaries and caucuses that television has turned into a confusing miasma may have left some of you wondering what it all means. I wish I could tell you. Then again, I wish I could tell you that it's all over.

It apparently takes a lot of nazi-like discipline to so pack a national political caucusing, where candidates are supposed to hold it down to one simple word, and one short sentence. "K. K. Churnakow, you are the best person for the job."

about which you don't know enough to be worried

"You can't party for 28 hours straight and live to talk about it."
"You've used your medical pills at least once."
"The money is more important than the title."
"You don't think anything that's rainbow-colored is safe."
"You worry that Social Security funds may run out by the time you're 60."
"You can't find your high school yearbook — and you don't care."
"You admit that those hairs are gray and not just sun-kissed."
"You have no intention of leaving the metric system."
"You try not to go on vacation when the colleges are out."
"You find it reassuring to see police around."

James Reston has completed his list of Russian proverbs the Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko has uttered during his meetings with the nine U.S. secretaries of state he has dealt with since 1971.

A Man from Moorefield

By Clark Rains

Just before the election in the United States, and especially in the state of Virginia, there were a number of people who were looking for a man from Moorefield. They were looking for a man who was a member of the House of Representatives and who was a member of the House of Representatives.
