Cataract, or "Cloudy Eye"

The word "cataract" is derived from a Greek word which means "to dash down". In nature, the word describes a waterfall or rapids. In medicine, it is a condition of the eye which, if undetected and untreated, can lead to blindness. Specifically, a cataract is a clouding of the lens of the eye partially blocking the entrance of light rays into the eye and causing blurred vision.

Among the first noticeable signs of cataracts are seeing spots before the eyes and having double vision. There is also a gradual reduction of vision, but no pain.

A cataract is treated by surgical removal of the eye's natural lens. The doctor will then prescribe temporary lenses until the eye is healed. Finally, permanent eyeglasses or contact lenses will supplant the lenses which have been removed from the eyes.

Although younger people can develop cataracts, the condition generally appears in people over 55 years of age.
