

Local hospital joins Health Care Network

Thirteen hospitals, including Nicholas County Hospital, have joined the Health Care Network, announced the formation of the Central Kentucky Health Care Network.

This network currently represents 17 counties, over 100 hospitals, over 300 physicians, and some new medical people. Its purpose is to develop feasible and efficient delivery systems which utilize resources, capital, and expertise among other things. The network will develop a request for proposal in the future for medical services.

Organization (HMO) and others in the state to be affiliated with the participating hospitals and physicians to do this in a planned health plan to be developed by the network.

Each participating hospital and physician has established the following principles to create a competitive environment in their community.

To achieve a most reasonable price for health care in the local community, provisions that maintain the quality of care, such as short-term care, and welcome input from interested members of the community, community organizations, and others.

Persons wishing to comment should contact James F. Souther, Network Coordinator, c/o Harrison Memorial Hospital, P.O. Box 306, Claydon, Kentucky 40301.

Other hospitals in the network include: Boone Hospital, Boone, Clark County Hospital, Winchester, Ephraim McDowell Hospital, Clarksville, Fort Ligon Hospital & Eastern Care Facility, Stanford, Garrard County Hospital, Lancaster, Harrison Memorial Hospital, Claydon, James H. In addition, Nicholas County Hospital would serve parts of Boone and Harrison counties which have no hospital.

Members of the board and medical staff at the local hospital met with their counterparts from Harrison and Owen counties Aug. 21 to formulate final plans for the network.
