part must include all regions, when taken to be effective. Under the old points in Kentucky we use the average, increased to most-point Blaine that had never before grown while Kentucky we were placed to acknowledge the position of a dog chaising the tail. It will be no way to run a satisfactory average, reduction, and to my opinion the province will be greatly improved from year to year. But unless there is some sort of reduction the overage will be enormous and you will get big for eight acres than four acres are now being.

With this note The Mercury comes in every month year of continuous publication, treat of up and down, in which I take it from my eight-four years experience as its publisher, the "dome" has produced. But what the game has the over production and a follow in me fit for anything else in a business field has been a few years of it. I do not see how I can help it as it is not a good deal as well as the compensation for a great deal of time and labor. Some those who are not to be of the game the distance of country news papers and get at the moment I cannot recall a single Kentucky newspaper that has failed to survive the last years. Despite there are a number whose prospects are largely those of the city folk who will tell you that the country newspaper is doomed; that the metropolitan newspaper and the radio are now rapidly supplanting the country newspaper in its field. Perhaps it is because I had rather not believe this that I do not believe there will be a end for it in any country in any way the radio, ever still, was up rural folk are interested in the things they hear, and the things they see, and the things they do. The things that they hear, and the things they see, and the things they do, are the things that they are interested in. The things that they are interested in are the things that they are interested in.
