Bob Watkins' Sports in Kentucky

People and things

Kentucky's basketball trip to Puerto Rico Nov. 24-29 has been cancelled, but don't feel bad for the Wildcats. Arrangements are in the final stages for a trip to Hawaii and a game against, you're right, Chamblissde.

College basketball recruiters are busy working the names on their shopping lists this month since NCAA guidelines allows coaches an "evaluation period" June 15 through July 31 and that means Kentucky's Leonard Hamilton, Louisville's Wade Houston, among others, can be found at summer basketball camps around the country.

One of the major ones is Bill Cronauer's B/C Camp at Rensselaer, Ind. I visited the camp last week at St. Joseph's College near Rensselaer and talked to some of the many talent scouts and college recruiters on hand to see the campers (and be seen by them). One coach at a major university in Kentucky, identified some of the players to watch who are or will be heavily recruited.

Wade Houston	Louisville	6-6
Pooner	Bullitt East	6-6
Derrick Dennison	Bullitt East	6-4
Dalton Spencer	Lou. Eastern	7-0
Terry Mills	Kansas, Mich.	6-7
Count Williams	Baltimore Wilkinson	6-7
Jimmy Oliver	Flint, Mich.	6-7
Chris Corbin	Flint, Mich.	6-6
Glenn Rice	Saginaw, Mich.	6-6
Jacqueline Harrison Duke, Ind.		6-9
Shawn Kemp	Elkhart, Ind.	6-9
Junior * Sophomore

UK's shopping list

Kentucky can be expected to spend as many as five of its six available hoop scholarships next season and one name high on the list this summertime is high school player of the year candidate Terry Mills. And apparently the feeling is mutual. At least until Michigan coach Bill Frieder begins his typically late recruiting push, the 6-9 Mills looks to be headed to Lexington.

UK fans will remember Michigan's late push in 1984 to spirit Gary Grant away from recruiter Leonard Hamilton.

Mills was the center of attention on another front last week. Prep entrepreneur Howard Garfinkel, who runs what is considered the General Motors of summer basketball camps, was said to be unhappy last week when told that Mills might skip his summer camp.

According to a source close to Garfinkel, Mills was told that if he did not show up for Garfinkel's camp next month then the 6-9 Michigan star could forget his chances of being named prep player of the year. That honor would go to J.R. Reid, 6-10 forward from Virginia Beach, Va.

Kentucky bumper crop

The Bluegrass state will be swarming with college recruiters before names go onto the dotted lines next spring. Including three underclassmen, here are my Kentucky's Double Baker's Dozen for the 1985-86 prep season.

Bobbie's Dozen I

 Will be a sophomore

NBA 'scholars'

One player selected in the NBA draft earlier this month who I hope survives the final cut is 6-11 Mike Lahm, from Murray State University. Selected by the Detroit Pistons, Lahm was the 119th player picked out of 162.

What's so special about Lahm? He had the best grade point average of any player chosen in the draft. An Academic All-American, the native of St. Louis had a perfect 4.0 in engineering physics and got his Master's Degree last spring.

Other first team Academic All-Americans were: Indiana's Ewe Blah, 3.4 in computer science, Harvard's Joe Carrabino, 3.2 in economics; and Keith Cheplick of William & Mary, 3.8 in religion.

Charlie Vacca

One of the nation's and the SEC's finest basketball officials Charlie Vacca's battle with Hodgkins disease has given him new perspective.

"The experience has made me more patient, more compassionate with coaches than I used to be. I understand the coaches better now."

On why there are no "tall" officials in basketball... "When you're a player and used to taking all the barrals from the crowds you're not interested in taking the abuse, all the guff you have to take."

Hupp Arena is Vacca's favorite place to work. "The size of the crowd and the proximity of the crowd (to the floor), is special. And you're talking about a large number of knowledgeable fans. I've refereed many games up there and there's this one guy who gets on my case as soon as I come in and stays on me till I leave. He calls me Vargas. He's always called me Vargas."

On Joe B. Hall... "The only thing he expected was a fair game (from referees) and once the game was over it was over. He never held a grudge. We've missed some calls that cost him games, but coach Hall accepted that as part of the sport."

John Ireland, veteran sports columnist for the Nashville Tennessean on Vacca: "He's the latest in a long line of great officials from Nashville. The others were John McPherson, Dave Scoben, Julius Seeed, Ralph Stout and Dale Kelley. Charlie's a fine one."

No alligator tears

Recommendations last week by the 44-member college presidents commission that stiffer penalties be applied to violators of NCAA rules brought predictable reactions from members of the coaching fraternity.

"They're trying to destroy us," one coach said of the so-called death penalty that would severely punish cheaters. Other names gave the following reactions to The Associated Press:

- From Kansas State football coach Jim Dickey: "It will be like getting shot in the stomach twice at close range."
- From Oklahoma State basketball coach Paul Hansen: "Any program that gets hit with all that is going to the graveyard. It's as simple as that. Some would recover. Some would recover sooner than others. But it would be a minimum of three or four years before you could even get your foundation built. Some may never recover."
- Johnny Orr, basketball coach at Iowa State: "I think almost every coach in the nation is in favor of what the presidents are trying to do. But I wish that every president would take a coaching recruiting trip with his coaches and see what really happens and what really goes on."

Comment: I find it difficult to sympathize with coaches who command inflated salaries and benefits. A coach must know not only how to coach an athletic team, but also how to keep the rules, make sure his assistants do also. He understands the risks when he signs a contract to coach. If, at some point he makes a decision to cheat to sign an athlete then he should be willing to accept the risk and consequences as well.

Seems simple enough, doesn't it?

And so, no reason for alligator tears.

They said it

■ NBC Sports college basketball analyst Bucky Waters on new North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano "worked the crowd! Getting a celebrity golf tournament earlier this summer. Unbelievable. The only problem was I was afraid he was going to get his tongue sunburned on the golf course."

■ Former Marshall State basketball coach Wayne Yates: "I believe academic counselors honestly want athletes to graduate."

But Yates says he heard one, "he could keep a cockroach eligible for two years. That's true."

■ University of Kentucky fans have to wonder about another Yates remark concerning the pressures of recruiting and winning. "If I pass on a great player who was a borderline student, some other school like Kentucky will take him."

Comment: Hmmmm.

■ A column item I wrote recently suggested Wayntip Tisdale will become a good NBA player after he gets over being the crybaby he was at Oklahoma brought this response from a reader in Hodgenville, Ky.

"There's a guy in Lexington last year who was a bigger crybaby than Tisdale. Kenny Walker."

Parting shot

Georgetown coach John Thompson's reaction when he learned Patrick Ewing has a 1-year-old son: "We sat down and had a personal discussion about it. I gave him a letter of intent and told him to get the baby's footprint."

And so it goes.

Just what is a Solo II Event?

by George Schweikle

When describing a slalom or Solo II course to someone unfamiliar with the activity, a question frequently asked is "What does the course look like?"

There is no standard answer to the question because there is no standard course. Solo II courses can assume as many details as there are sites to lay them out on. Generally the course is designed to fit within the confines of the site size, to have good traffic flow for starting and finishing cars and to comply with Sports Car Club of America safety regulations.

At Blue Grass Industries' lot there isn't enough room to lay out a simple one-lap course long enough to have the desired 45 second to one minute timed run. The July 4th event will be two consecutive timed laps per run. The course itself will be set up to be as foolproof as possible to keep people from getting lost. Driving a Solo II course is a learned skill just like learning to do any other kind of unfamiliar task and we want the learning to be as easy as possible for any new contestants.

TO FURTHER aid in course following, we will define the edges of the course with stripes of lime and will also have small copies of the course maps available. When standing back from a parking lot full of traffic pylons, the route through those pylons may not be obvious. A course map is always helpful but the most important thing is to walk the course.

There will probably be four timed runs so memorizing the course prior to the first run is very important. Walking the course can be done as many times as you want prior to the drivers' meeting and is of such value that some entrants will spend an hour or more walking and planning their driving.

IF YOU are planning on entering, there are classes for almost every type of car and preparation level. A sports car is not required, nor are special modifications. An economy sedan with the tires equipped up to 35 PSI and the driver wearing a borrowed helmet can be as competitive in its class as the proud owner of a sports car who has spent thousands of dollars for modifications.

The important thing is to have fun and one of your goals in conducting this event is to introduce a new way to do this to people in the Carlisle area. Listed below is a quick summary of important items for this first potential entrant.

Registration: 10:00/11:30, at Blue Grass Industries lot. $5 for non-members, $6 members of a recognized car club and $5 for SCCA members A valid driver's license is required.

Technical inspection: 10:00/11:00. Your car should be in good mechanical condition with all loose items removed. Tires should be inflated to at least 33 PSI and hubcaps must be removed. All cars must have seat belts.

The Event: First timed runs will begin at 12 noon. Novice entrants will be given a practice lap. Loaner helmets will be available. The best of four timed runs will count for trophies.

The next Central Ky. Region SCCA Solo II events will be August 4 in Richmond at the Eastern Kentucky University Police Training Range and September 6 in Lexington at the Commonwealth Stadium lot on the University of Kentucky campus.

Editor's note: The author is past president of the Central Kentucky Region Sports Car Club of America.

James "Hocky" Moore entertained a number of friends with a fish fry at his home on Saturday night.

Health Tips

Sibling rivalry

Jealousy between children will exist if parents decide to have more than one child. It is better for parents to realize that it will occur than to deny that it happens.

The symptoms of jealousy may show as hostile acts toward the new brother or sister or destructive acts toward the child's own self. Self destructive acts may be allowing grades to drop in school, or refusing to participate in activities that the child likes to do. The jealous child may also regress in behavior such as thumbsucking, or wetting pants.

Some important aspects for parents to remember in dealing with jealousy between children follows:

*Prepare your children for a birth or adoption before it happens.

*If possible space children three or more years apart. An older child will deal better with the fact that parents are spending more time with another child or a baby.

*Emphasize that an infant is small and helpless and needs lots of care, downplay the "playmate" role.

*When the next child arrives allow the older one to do "special" activities appropriate for the age.

*Allow the older child to help with the baby's care.

*Give the older child time alone with the parents each day doing something the child likes to do. This time period should be about one-half hour.

ASPECTS for parents to consider for themselves when they are dealing with sibling rivalry:

*Relax!

*Look at yourself in your interaction with your children but be positive.

*Jealousy between, children (sibling rivalry) is normal and healthy.

*Sibling rivalry allows a child to test values and behaviors learned from parents.

*Sibling rivalry helps a child learn to compete and test his or her own limits and potential; this will be carried to adulthood.

If you child shows extreme behavior in exhibiting jealousy, or you do not see an improvement in your child's behavior within six months, you may need to take him or her to a professional for counseling.

Most children who are helped in a positive manner during the painful time of learning to share parents with a new child, will grow out of it a more mature child more able to deal with more complex issues as they grow up.

Trucks involved in wrecks July 1 near Ellisville

A one vehicle no-injury wreck near Ellisville early Monday morning, July 1, set the stage for a second accident minutes later, according to Sheriff Deputy Nicholas County deputy sheriff.

A 1967 Chevrolet pickup truck driven by Steven Valandingham, 20, of Miamisburg, Ohio, was demolished when it ran off Mayeville Road at the Russell Dixon residence, knocking down a utility pole, mailbox and a section of fence before coming to rest against a tree.

The guy wire from the downed utility pole hooked into an oncoming tractor trailer rig filled with frozen food and owned by the W.T. Sutrunk Co. of Lexington. The driver, William E. Jackson of Frankfort, was unable to avoid the wire across the road but was able to bring the rig to a stop without leaving the pavement. Conservancy of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Doyle at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Doyle of Cynthiana on Saturday night.

Valandingham and a 20-year-old male companion received only scratches, Smith said. The accidents occurred about 1:45 a.m.

Name omitted

The name of Sheila D. Livingood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Livingood, was inadvertently omitted from the list of students who achieved honorary attendance recognition in last week's paper.
