Eye Openers
By Dr. Robert F. Pretzsch, Optometrist
What Kind Of Sunglasses?
For most people, polished and ground plastic prescription sunglasses filter out an adequate amount of the sun's rays and annoying glare, and they are considerably lighter than glass sunglasses. Plastic sunglasses are coated with a fixed tint that does not change in response to the intensity of the sun. Visual acuity remains sharp for most people despite changes in light.
Other people—particularly those with special eye conditions—may be ultrasensitive to sunlight. Yet they need all the light they can get to see well in semi-shaded places. For them, photochromatic lenses are often prescribed. These not only protect the eyes from the harmful rays of the sun, but change in density depending on the light. On a brilliantly sunny day, photochromatic lenses will darken to eliminate a maximum of sun glare, but in semi-shade they will fade and allow more natural sunlight to reach the eyes.
Photochromatic or fixed tint—NO sunglasses are dark enough to prevent damage from the sun's direct rays. NEVER look directly at the sun.

Teacher salaries on the rise

Kentucky schoolteachers received an average salary of $21,486 during the 1984-85 school year, a report submitted to the State Board of Education shows.

Salary schedules of the state's 180 local school districts were approved by the board at a meeting in Frankfort earlier this month. The average salary is based on a compilation of salaries for all certified personnel in local school districts.

The figure represents a $641 increase over the average salary in the 1983-84 school year. The 1984-85 average salary is nearly $12,000 higher than the average of $9,368 in 1974-75.
