Carlisle man

Sterling, Cynthiana and Maysville, has warned Harker, and other government officials that it might have to close its plants if forced to reduce chloride emissions content at its Carlisle plant, where the dyeing operation takes place.

Barry Mademann, Jockey's vice-president for textile operations at IGK, pointed out this week that the federal EPA could run tests at any number of wells in eastern Kentucky at any time to determine if the water content exceeded the 250/1 part ratio, a long established federal standard for drinking water.

He went on to say that chloride effluent at the plant's discharge pipe (tested at 1665/1) is well under the drinking water standard less than 600 yards from the plant, where it tests at 199/1 when mixed with water in Brushy Fork Creek. In the ditch, or gulley, into which the emission is discharged the chloride content tested at 595, before mixing with creek water. At Millersburg, the water quality tests out at a 18/1 ratio, 223 points lower than required to meet drinking water standards.

RUMORS that Jockey is considering moving its local operations to North Carolina could not be confirmed. Mademann did indicate that lack of clarification from state officials has become frustrating to company officers.

"Harker (division of water director) promised us months ago he would personally visit our operation and we haven't seen him yet."

Mine Grass plants will close for three weeks' vacation beginning this Friday afternoon. Normal closing is two weeks but the additional time is being taken due to a slow period in operations, Mademann said.

The contest is open to all non-professionals from this area between the ages of 10 to 20. Any act running more than four minutes will be disqualified.

Entries will be accepted until July 8 from the following categories: Vocal solo, vocal group, instrumental solo, band, dance solo, dance group, dance novelty group, dance novelty solo, variety solo and variety group.

For an application form and a copy of the rules write: Talent Show, Ewing-Fleming County Fair, Box 131, Flemingsburg, Ky. 41041 or phone 845-6871 or 267-2171.

Beef cattle referendum scheduled on July 12

The Kentucky Beef Cattle Association will hold a referendum Friday, July 12, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., to vote on a 15-cent per head assessment increase to strengthen consumer education efforts and market development.

If the assessment passes, it will bring the total assessment to 25 cents a head.

The referendum will be held in all 120 counties, with polling taking place at the local ASCS office in each county.

Producers will be permitted to vote only in their counties of residence.

If a producer has cattle in a county other than the one in which he lives, he will still vote in his county of residence.

A corporate producer will vote in the county in which the corporation's principal place of business is located.

Eligible voters from outside the Commonwealth will be permitted to vote in the county in which the farm is located.

If the referendum passes, everyone licensed to operate a livestock market in Kentucky, as well as operators of meat packing or slaughter establishments and order buyers, will be required to deduct the additional assessment from the purchase price to the seller.

If passed, the assessment will be deducted beginning on Sept. 1, 1985 and administered by the Kentucky Beef Cattle Association.

A full and complete copy of the referendum regulations is available at ASCS offices and the local county extension agent office.
