

Before you dig you better call BUD

"Planting a garden? Adding an extra room? Before you do any digging, call BUD - Kentucky's Underground Utilities Protection Center."

"South Central Bell and many other Kentucky utilities install underground cables, lines and pipes and keep maintenance costs low and the surrounding area attractive," said Tom Tucker, local manager. "But if these underground facilities are damaged by cuts, you've got a disruption of service and costly emergency repairs."

Tucker urges all diggers - from backyard gardeners to professional contractors - to call BUD before turning that first shovel of dirt. The center, nicknamed BUD to remind you to call "Before You Dig," will notify the utilities in your area. If there are underground facilities in the area where you plan to dig, the utility crews will mark the site with colored flags or paint.

"There is no charge for the service," Tucker said. "BUD's toll-free number is 1-800-724-6607 and the center is open Monday through Friday, 7 a.m. to 6 p.m."
