What school boards do program available

A program about the role of school board members developed by the Kentucky School Boards Association (KSBA) will be presented throughout the state in September and October.

With the theme, "Different People, Same Dream... Quality Education for All," this program is designed to inform the public as well as those in education, about what school boards do and about the challenges and responsibilities of school board membership.

Enrollment open for GED instruction

QUALITY SCHOOLS are important to everyone in a community, not just students and their parents. Business professionals know the importance of having good schools in order to recruit capable employees, to have a pool of qualified applicants from among graduates of the community's schools and to attract new business to the community. Good schools and well-trained students contribute to the quality of life in a community.

Strong effective leadership is critical to the success of a community's public schools. It is the local school board which charts the course for the schools through long-range planning, setting goals and objectives, selecting administrators to direct the schools and establishing policies by which the school operates.

IT IS THE LOCAL school board which interprets the suggestions and concerns to the community and vice versa. The KET/GED program was designed to supplement existing adult education programs and to provide an alternative for adults unable to attend traditional GED classes because of transportation, child care, problems, work schedules or a desire for privacy.
