

Can write what they say

Writing centers for kindergarten and first grade to become a reality

Writing centers where youngsters in kindergarten and first grade learn to write anything they can say can now be a reality in all Kentucky school districts next month, through a pilot project being undertaken by the Kentucky Department of Education.

Who-o-o's in your barn?

Farmers, what would you give to have something in your barn that can eat more rats and mice than a dozen cats? This rodent ratter has 20 to 30 times more sensitive than man and is a more sensitive than any other rat and mouse bait that can eat any rat and mouse that it meets and catch prey in total darkness. Because of its ability to see in the dark, it is known as the "Night Owl" or "Who-o-o's in your barn."

Gasoline prices are unchanged AAA reports

The 23.5 MILLION motorists expected to be on the highways over the Christmas holidays will find gasoline prices have not changed since Thanksgiving, AAA reports.

ALTHOUGH relatively rare in Kentucky, the barn owl has a worldwide distribution surpassed by only the house sparrow.
