Gobblers released

Clay Management Wildlife Area manager Richard Hines is shown last Thursday releasing one of 14 wild turkeys to be stocked at the farm this spring as part of the Department of Fish and Wildlife's restoration program. Any sightings of the turkeys on or off the wildlife area should be reported by calling 289-2564 in order to help evaluate survival of the birds. Betty Berryman is installed president of Kentucky Press

Betty Berryman, general manager of the Winchester Sun, was installed as the first woman president of the Kentucky Press Association Saturday.

The installation came as the association completed its 117th annual convention held at The BrownHotel in Louisville. The association, an organization of Kentucky's weekly and daily newspapers, was founded in 1869.

"Being elected president, especially to be the first woman president of the Kentucky Press Association, is a tribute to Betty's longtime work as a member of the board and the executive committee of KPA," said David T. Thompson, the KPA's executive director.

Other 1986 officers of the association are Max Heath, Landmark Community Newspapers, Shelbyville, president-elect; Gloria Bushelman, Recorder Newspapers, vice president; Steve Austin, The Gleaner, Henderson, treasurer; and Floe Bowles, The News-Enterprise, Elizabethtown, past president.

Also honored during the three-day convention in Louisville were Heath, selected as the association's most valuable member, and George Joplin IV of The Commonwealth-Journal in Somerset, who received the Edwards Templin Memorial Award.

The Templin Award is presented annually by the Lexington Herald-Leader to a newspaper representative for outstanding community service. Edwards Templin, promotion director of the Herald-Leader at the time, died in 1967 at a time when he was to be president of KPA.

Disabled workers should apply now for benefits

Workers suffering from a physical or mental impairment which prevents them from working should consider applying for Social Security disability benefits when it appears this condition will last 12 months or more.

Social Security disability benefits can be paid to workers under 65, disabled widows or widowers 50 or over, and to unmarried adult children disabled before 22.

Under Social Security, a person is considered disabled if he or she has a condition which prevents him or her from doing any substantial gainful work and is expected to last at least 12 months or result in death.

No payments can be made to a disabled worker, widow or widower for the first five months of the disability.

Before a person applies for disability benefits, it will be helpful if he or she gathers certain information. This will help speed the application process, and includes: the person's Social Security number; date last worked, date person became ill or injured, type of illness or injury, date returned to work if no longer disabled, names, address and telephone numbers of doctors, hospitals, institutions or clinics that provided treatment for the disability and dates of treatment, military service serial number and VA claim number if available, lists of kinds of jobs performed in past 10 years, names, Social Security numbers and dates of birth of spouse and children, workers compensation number or number of other disability benefit claims if any.

A person should not delay applying if all this information is not available. The people at the Social Security office may be able to help and they can give more information about disability benefits. The Marysville Social Security office is located at 204 U.S. 68, Maysville, and the telephone number is 606-564-4096.

Ford's Footnotes

by Sen. Ed Ford

Education and money were recurring themes threading their way through many of the subjects my fellow senators and I considered last week.

A proposed constitutional amendment making the superintendent of public instruction appointive rather than elective sailed through the Senate rather easily, being approved 36-2.

The amendment would allow the governor to appoint the 13 members of the state school board, which would then select a superintendent of public instruction. The bill as we passed it would have six of the board members appointed to represent the state at-large. The other seven would be chosen regionally, one from each state Supreme Court district. The gubernatorial appointments would be for six years, with initial appointees serving varying-length terms in order to stagger expiration dates. The board-appointed superintendent would serve under a contract that could run up to five years. The contract could be renewed.

The proposed constitutional amendment has gone to the House of Representatives, where it will be considered again. If approved by that body, it would be submitted to voters in the November election.

The Senate has passed a bill that would prohibit local school boards from using tax money to sue the General Assembly or Governor. The bill was introduced in response to a decision by 66 state school districts to earmark up to 50 cents per enrolled student to pay legal expenses in a suit they filed against several elected officials, including the president pro tem of the Senate.

The Appropriations and Revenue Committee has begun hearings on the budgets of two of the three branches of state government.

The judicial branch has presented a budget seeking pay raises for judges, expanded computer capacity, and six new judgeships.

The budget request adds two additional district judgeships in Fayette County, a new circuit judgeship for Clay, Jackson and Leslie counties, as well as one additional district judgeship, each in Kenton, Bullitt, and the Calloway-Marshall County district. The five new district judgeships would cost $703,000 over the next two years. The new circuit judgeship would cost $217,000 over the biennium. The pricetag for all judicial operations is upwards of $140 million for the next two fiscal years.

The Appropriations and Revenue Committee is also taking a look at the budget for the legislative branch.

The largest of the three budgets, to be presented to all of us this week when the governor delivers her Budget Message. We will then spend the next six weeks or so going over that spending plan line by line.

Just a reminder that as a member of the Senate, I am in Frankfort to represent you and your interests during the legislative session. I would like to hear your views and suggestions on the many issues we will be considering during the next three months. If you would like to leave a message for me at my Frankfort office during session, just call the toll-free Legislative Message Line. That number is 1-800-372-7181. You can also write to me at the State Capitol, Frankfort, 40601.

Adult education center to help prepare workers

Supt. of Public Instruction Alice McDonald has announced that an adult education center would be established in Scott County to help prepare potential Toyota factory workers for jobs at the new plant.

"As Toyota breaks ground in Georgetown, we are breaking ground in adult education to ensure that adults and surrounding counties have the skills and credentials to apply for those jobs," McDonald said.

What do a family of fishermen from Boston, a Middle Eastern sheik's entourage, a scout troop from Denver, and 300 doctors from the Midwest have in common?

They were all tourists in Kentucky last year—and, along with more than 15 million others, they comprised "the visiting team" that spent over $3.7 billion from Pikeville to Paducah, and virtually everywhere in between. Your Kentucky Tourism Industry thanks you for remembering that a thriving tourism industry is an investment in Kentucky's economic future.
