Shown above are, left, John Cleaver, Edna Huddeston and Lucille Feebok, lay members of the Nicholas County Schools Textbook Adoption Committee. The schools will be adopting textbooks

for reading, literature, health, art, foreign languages and driver's education this year. The books selected will be used by the students in the Nicholas County Schools for the next six years. Lay members give community input into the selection process. — Gwatha photo.

Kentucky Afield

By John Wilson
Although most hunting seasons are still open, many sportsmen have left the field and are already beginning to think about spring fating.
But there's a small, dedicated group of sportsmen who continue to hunt until the season closes. They find the woods and fields less crowded and hunting conditions often better than earlier in the season.
Squirrel season closed Dec. 31, along with the deer archery season. But waterfowl and mallard ducks and geese are still open. Rabbit and quail seasons will close Feb. 14 and quail season Feb. 28. Furberer hunting and trapping seasons will run through Jan. 31.
Duck hunting season closed Jan. 13. Closing date is Jan. 20 for geese in the Eastern Waterfowl Zone. Goose hunters in the Ballantyne Zone reached their quota, so the season there closed at the end of shooting hour Jan. 18.
But before you grab your gun, while up old Spot and head out better check your hunting license. 1986 licenses expired at midnight Dec. 31 so you'll need a new license to hunt now. Remember that 1985 Kentucky State Waterfowl Stamps also expired at the end of the year, and you now need a 1986 version for hunting ducks and geese.
The best bet for the sportsman who hunts birds and fishes is to buy a combination license, so you'll be able to hunt now and also be all set when the walleye, white bass or crappie start running in a couple of months.

A resident duck or fishing license costs $7.50 each, while a combination license is $14.50. Youngsters under 18 years old may fish without a license, but they will need a junior hunting license $4 for residents; non-resident youngsters must pay the full price for a non-resident license.
An annual non-resident license costs $40, while a three-day non-resident small game permit is $14.50. Deer permits are $11.50 and turkey permits $4.50 for both residents and non-residents.
Non-resident fishing licenses are $2 for a three-day permit and $8.50 for a 15-day license. Trout stamps are $2.50 for both resident and non-resident trout fishermen.
Kentucky residents 65 years old or older do not need sport licenses, but they should obtain a free lifetime license from their county court clerk. Landowners and members of their immediate families do not need licenses to hunt or fish on their own property. Tenants and their family members also don't need licenses to hunt or fish on lands where they both reside and work. Non-resident landowners must have licenses.
Also Kentucky resident veterans who are permanently and totally disabled as the result of military related injuries may hunt or fish without a license.
The revenue from license fees represents the main source of funding for the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, which receives none of your state income tax, sales tax or other tax monies.

Dairy farmers may sell out

Some Kentucky farmers may be enticed to leave dairying to comply with the whole-herd dairy buyout program portion of the new farm bill.
The program allows qualifying dairymen to sell their entire herd and receive payment from the government for the milk they would have produced. If they agree to stay out of dairying for five years, explained Dick Beck, an agricultural economist in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.
To qualify for the program, a dairyman must have been in production prior to Dec. 31, 1984 or began production after that time through inheritance or gift, Beck said.
A producer who wants to participate in the program will be required to submit a bid to the government specifying how much he wants per hundredweight of milk that he would have produced during the five-year period, Beck said.
Although the secretary of agriculture can accept or reject all bids, the law states that the program must be implemented no later than April 1, 1986, Beck said.
