Nicholas unemployed declines

An improved economy, buoyed by seasonal increases in agriculture, trade, services and construction, helped push unemployment down for the third month in a row in most Kentucky counties in May, according to figures released by the Cabinet for Human Resources.

Unemployment rates dropped in 103 counties between April and May. In 13 counties the rates went up and in two they were the same.

Nicholas County reported a 7.1 rate, down from 7.2 in April.

The number of counties reporting double-digit unemployment also declined. In May, 66 counties reported jobless rates of 10 percent or above, compared to 82 in April and 60 in May 1985.

The local jobless figures reflected a decline in the state rate from a revised 10 percent in April to a preliminary 9.1 percent in May. It was the first time this year the state had recorded a single-digit rate. The May rate was the lowest since December, when it was 9.5 percent. May also was the first month this year that the number of Kentucky jobholders exceeded 1.3 million.

For the third month in a row Trimble County reported the lowest rate in the state, 2.7 percent, followed by Woodford with 3.8 percent, Oldham with 3.9 percent, Shelby with 4.3 percent and Fayette with 4.5 percent.

Elliott County's 22.1 percent rate was the highest, followed by McCreary's 21.3 percent, Magoffin's 21 percent and Lee's 20 percent.

Juvenile court procedures program topic

District Judge Robert W. McGinnis of the 18th Judicial District attended a special program on juvenile court procedures, held in Louisville, June 25-27.

The two-day program focused primarily on newly revamped court procedures to be adopted for dependency actions in juvenile court. Juvenile court dependency actions require that the court protect children suspected of being abused or neglected, while at the same time, protecting the due process rights of parents or guardians.

It is a delicate balance to maintain and the legislation governing such matters is procedurally intricate, it was noted.

Some 89 District judges from around the state attended the program to learn about the new procedures and to review standing procedures to be sure they are conducting dependency hearings properly and effectively for all parties concerned.

The judges observed a simulated dependency court action which covered most of the situations district judges encounter in such cases. They were given opportunities to ask questions about and discuss the issues raised during the simulation, including conducting arraignments, issuing emergency protective orders, appointment of counsel for parents and guardian ad litem for children, and asking children questions pertinent to the situation.

The day-long simulation also demonstrated what standards of proof are required, the value of medical evaluations, hospitalization requirements, consideration to be given expert testimony on the effects of removing a child from the home, and dispositional alternatives.

The program was sponsored by Administrative Office of the Courts Education Services with curriculum developed by the District Judges Education Committee.

Help available for home buyers with low incomes

Effective July 15, 1986, lower and moderate income Kentuckians who have been unable to find a home priced within Kentucky Housing Corporation's guidelines will receive help through KHC's Homeownership Program.

In a resolution passed by KHC's board of directors, the Corporation will initiate its first new purchase price guidelines since July 3, 1980.

Under the new guidelines, the purchase price for an existing home previously financed or purchased through KHC is $53,000. In Nicholas County, the purchase price for a new home is $56,000.

For more information on KHC's Homeownership Program, call toll-free 1-800-633-8896.

Commission pushes grade crossing safety

The Kentucky Railroad Commission has ordered C&O Railway to appear before the commission on July 15 to show cause why further orders of the commission in applying sanctions against C&O Railway should not be imposed for their failure to obey directives of the Kentucky Railroad Commission issued January 8.

Three other matters relating to safety of grade crossings in Kentucky will also be heard on July 15 at the State Office Building, Fourth Floor Conference Room, Frankfort, Kentucky, at 10 a.m.

The Kentucky Railroad Commission, with a budget of only $78,400 for the '86-87 fiscal year, will concentrate its efforts on grade crossing safety throughout the State of Kentucky in the upcoming fiscal year. "The Kentucky Railroad Commission will continue an aggressive program to ensure the safety of citizens throughout the State of Kentucky," stated chairman Jimmy Turner.

All matters relating to prosecutions for failure of railroads operating in Kentucky to obey safety laws in conjunction with the generally unsafe conditions at the more than 8,300 grade crossings throughout the state will be referred to the Attorney General for enforcement.

Waugh van vandalized

A 1975 Chevy van owned by Douglas (Rodney) Waugh of Carlisle was damaged on July 4 between 8 p.m. and midnight while parked on Spring Street.

Waugh said that rocks thrown at the vehicle damaged the door on the passenger's side of the vehicle. He is offering a reward for information concerning the incident.

Early space days to air Wednesday

"Growing Up With Rockets" history of America's space program through the personal memories of filmmaker Kerry Bonito, who grew up in the rocket boom town established on the mountaintop of Cumberland Gap, Tenn.

Producer and director Yaweck narrates this one-hour film documenting the triumphs and tragedies of the space program in the 1960s and '90s through rare collection of home movies, newsreels, and archival footage. The one-hour program airs Wednesday, July 9, at 9 p.m. on KET.

Yaeecko and her family moved to Florida in 1966 when her father began the project designing the Apollo Saturn V moon rocket. Yaeecko's family was among the thousands who actually went to hunt on area the chance to do so. Drawings to limit the number of hunters are necessary on these areas because too many deer hunters could lead to an over-harvest of deer, Phillips says.

Application forms for these managed hunts may be obtained by writing the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Deer Hunt Application Request, No. 1 Game Farm Road, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

Federal areas — Ft. Knox, Ft. Campbell, and Between the Lakes, the Bluegrass Army Depot and the Reelfoot National Wildlife Refuge — also have managed deer hunts, but hunters must apply to each of these areas separately.

Deer hunt applications available

by John Wilson

Applications for applying for managed deer hunts in Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources wildlife management areas are now available.

Advance applications are necessary for those wishing to participate in gun hunts on the Beaver Creek (McCreary and Pulaski counties), Redbird (Leslie County), Higginson-Henry Union County), Wenk Kentucky (McCracken County), Yellowbank (Breckinridge County), Dewey Lake (Floyd County) and Kleber (Owen County) wildlife management areas.

Gun deer hunts on all these areas except Wenk Kentucky will be held on the first Saturday and Sunday in December. At the West Kentucky Wildlife Management Area, a special hunt for youngsters is scheduled for the fourth Saturday and Sunday in November, and the regular gun hunt for the second Saturday and Sunday in December.

APPLICATIONS must be made on a standardized form available from the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. There have been some changes in the drawing procedures this year, so applicants should follow the instructions on the form carefully.

This year, hunters may apply only one time and must list their first, second and third choice of the area they wish to hunt. A wildlife area will be assigned from this list of preferences if the hunter's application is chosen in the computerized drawing.

Completed applications must be mailed by August 31, and applicants will be notified after October 1 if they have been successful in the drawing and what area they have been assigned to hunt.

The changes in procedure were necessitated by the large number of "no shows" at these managed hunts in the past. "Apparently many hunters were signing up for every hunt, then participating in only one," according to John Phillips, the wildlife biologist in charge of Kentucky's deer program.

PHILLIPS HOPES that limiting each hunter to one area and then assigning areas will solve this problem and give those hunters who actually want to hunt on an area the chance to do so. Drawings to limit the number of hunters are necessary on these areas because too many deer hunters could lead to an over-harvest of deer, Phillips says.

Application forms for these managed hunts may be obtained by writing the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Deer Hunt Application Request, No. 1 Game Farm Road, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.
