Barbecues cost more
Pork, poultry push food index higher

Backyard barbecues got more expensive during June as retail price increases for pork and chicken pushed the average cost of food in Kentucky supermarkets up by slightly more than one percentage point, according to a survey by the state's marketbasket survey.
The June brought the statewide marketbasket index up to 158.37, from the May figure of 157.15 and 157.19 in April. It also marked the second consecutive monthly increase measured by the survey. The last time that occurred was August 1984.
Analysts said that lower herd numbers and peak summertime demand combined last month to boost live hog and poultry prices, which in turn caused the retail rate to climb. Pork cuts jumped 7 percent during June while poultry items averaged 10.3 percent more despite slightly lower prices for eggs.

OTHER FOOD categories in the survey were less volatile. Beef prices stayed virtually even during the period, as did grain-based foods. Dairy items fell by half a percentage point and fruits and vegetables were 3 percent lower on the basis of reduced prices for fresh produce.
All five pork cuts on the 40-item marketbasket survey showed healthy price hikes. Loin chops were up by 15 cents to $2.24 a pound, from 22 cents to $1.81 and ribs, a barbecuing favorite, climbed 17 cents a pound to $1.76.
BALANCING the marketbasket somewhat were dairy and produce items which showed price declines. Lettuce was 27 cents cheaper, at 79 cents a head, tomatoes were off 7 cents at 89 cents a pound, cheddar cheese dropped 10 cents to $2.69 and ice cream was 15 cents lower, averaging $1.36 a half-gallon.
Looking to the future, most analysts say the run-up in prices on big markets has probably peaked, with hogs commanding a slightly higher per-pound return at present than cattle. Traditionally, says Kentucky Farm Bureau market analyst Jeff Hall, hogs average some $10 a hundred cheaper than cattle.

But Hall says retail pork prices could continue to climb in coming weeks if consumer demand for the product doesn't fall. Time has of about a month are normal as price changes work their way from commodity markets through the food marketing chain, he said.
MOREHEAD CLAIMED the low spot among local marketbasket averages while London checked in with the highest figure. Overall, volunteers working through Kentucky Farm Bureau Western canvassed retail food prices in 21 Kentucky communities.
The local averages were

Morehead, $1.23; Richmond, $3.53; Greenup, $6.06; Sayreville, $6.98; Lexington, $6.71; Somerset, $7.38; Scottsville, $7.29; Georgetown, $8.25; Glasgow, $8.39; Tompkinsville, $8.45; Elizabethtown, $9.27; Hopkinsville, $9.49; Greenburg, $9.52; Dry Ridge, $9.68; Paducah, $9.13; Owensboro, $9.89; Campbellsville, $9.81; Shelbyville, $9.82; Louisville, $1.34; and London, $2.32.
