JTPA funding deadline June 23

Schools and community-action agencies who received Job Training Partnership Act funds through the Kentucky Department of Education to finance literacy programs must reapply for the funds by June 23.

The Adult Education Unit administers the funds that provide services for undereducated and economically disadvantaged adults. Schools, vocational centers and community action centers across the state have used the funds to set up programs in the past.

Because the amount of JTPA funds sent to the state has been reduced, we encourage applicants to apply only for the amount they spent last year," Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald said.

To request an application, or help in filling one out, call Karla Gibbs in the Department of Education at 502-564-3921.

Green River Lake alive with muskies

Predictions about a muskie fishing "boom" at Green River Lake have apparently come true.

Last November, fishery biologists with the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources predicted that muskellunge stockings in this South-Central Kentucky impoundment were about to pay off, and that this year fishermen would start catching keeper muskie in good numbers.

Confirmation of this prediction comes from Owen Cheif, editor of the Kentucky Silver Muskie Club's publication, The "Muskie Line". Cheif reported in a letter to the fish and wildlife department that a recently conducted tournament at Green was "great".

"Fifty-two people registered to fish and 11 legal size fish were caught" during the May 31-June 1 tournament Cheif said. "That's twice the average for northern muskie tournaments and twice the catch ratio at Cave Run," Cheif added. Cave Run Lake, near Morehead, has been stocked with muskies since 1974 and has developed into one of the country's leading muskie lakes.

TO A BASS or crappie angler, 11 fish among 52 fishermen may not sound too impressive, but to those who cast for muskie these results are something to write ahead. A dedicated muskie angler considers a fishing trip a success if he sees a muskie or gets a strike. Actually catching one of these giant battlers is an occasion for celebration and photograps.

In this context, when Cheif reports that "Lonnie Davis of Campbellsville and his young son told me that they saw 17 fish the day of the tournament and a number of boats raised 12 and 16," it was truly a great day of muskie fishing.

Cheif reported that, unlike in Cave Run Lake, the fish were not around standing timber. Rather, the muskie were near trees that had fallen into the water. "We shared our knowledge of where (the fish) live with the fellows who didn't know the water," Cheif said, and as a result "we couldn't keep track of the subleg fish caught."

ANOTHER INDICATION of the developing muskie fishery at Green is the fact that Raymond Morris, a local angler, recently landed the largest muskie ever caught from Green River Lake. The fish weighed 25 pounds, two ounces and was 46 inches long.

The Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources began stocking muskies in Green River Lake in 1977, but the 6-inch fish stocked between then and 1982 didn't survive well. So starting in 1983, the muskies were held in rearing ponds where they reached 9-12 inches.

This increased stocking size has apparently made a significant difference in survival rates. So last year, the stocking rate was increased from 1,500 to over 8,500 muskies (approximately one per surface acre of water). It takes just over three years for a nine-inch muskie to reach the 30-inch minimum legal size.

Although the muskellunge is associated in the minds of many anglers with the north woods, this fish is a native in many Kentucky Rivers. The current state record (43 pounds) was caught from Dale Hollow Lake, But Cave Run has been the place to catch muskies in recent years. Annual stockings of one fish per acre there have created and maintained an excellent fishery, biologists say.

WITH THIS SAME stocking rate at Green, it looks like we have another muskie lake that will rival or exceed the best that Minnesota or Canada can offer.

Although some fishermen have expressed concern of the impact muskies might have on other game species, biologists who have investigated the matter thoroughly say that this large fish can co-exist with bass, crappie and bluegill.

Green River Lake has a tremendous supply of bait fish, so the competition for food will not hurt the bass fishery, according to Biologist Benjy Kinman. Studies at the lake have shown that the size structure of bass have remained the same since the muskie stockings have accelerated.

Deeds recorded

Paul L. and Janey H. Garrett, deed to Lot No. 2, Nicholas County Subdivision, Unit 1-A, to Farmers Home Administration, $1 and etc., March 24, 1986.

Monica M. Allison, deed to tract of land on Pineview Lane lying near city of Carlisle, to Nathan J. Allison, $1 and agreement of parties, March 18, 1986.

Boyce C. Pollman, executor of the estate of R. Gordon Levi, deed to 40.3228 acres of land on U.S. 68, to Paul K. and Patricia Gayle Clark, $99,500, April 14, 1986.

'Kentucky Afield' for outdoorsmen

"Kentucky Afield," which airs Wednesdays at 7:30 p.m. on KET, has an entertaining lineup this summer for the outdoorsman.

"Kentucky Afield" will travel to Butler County for a visit with Garret Burden of Morgantown. Burden is a 97 year-old Baptist minister who, according to series host Jeremy Dreier, is Kentucky's oldest turkey hunter and Butler County's most successful one.

Also this summer "Kentucky Afield" will take a trip to the Licking River to look for baby wood ducks. In another program, "Kentucky Afield" cameras and crew will go to Hopkins County to look at bass fishing in the swamps.

On a later program, Dreier will introduce viewers to the phenomenon of how wetlands purify water. This unique filtering action can reduce acid mine runoff, according to Dreier.

Included in each episode, always, will be updates on summertime fishing on Kentucky's streams and lakes.

Anti-apartheid activist profiled

Dramatic stories of daily life in black South African townships, along with film segments and photographs, many shown for the first time on American television, are featured when "Mandela" airs Wednesday, June 25 at 9 p.m. on KET.

The focal point of this powerful special is Winnie Mandela, wife of imprisoned African National Congress (ANC) leader Nelson Mandela and the foremost female anti-apartheid activist in South Africa. "Mandela" also chronicles the past 30 years of the anti-apartheid movement among black South Africans.
