Kellogg's grant to strengthen volunteerism in 4-H programs

The Kentucky 4-H program, with a $94,000 grant from the Kellogg Foundation, will take the lead in a nationwide effort to strengthen volunteerism in the 4-H program.

Charles E. Barnhart, dean of University of Kentucky's College of Agriculture and director of the state's Cooperative Extension Service, in announcing receipt of the grant recently said the $94,000 is the largest single grant provided by the Kellogg Foundation from almost a million dollars being awarded to 12 land-grant universities.

Kentucky's 4-H Council system is recognized as one of the best in the country, Barnhart said. The grant money will be used to develop a method of exporting their expertise to other parts of the country.

The state 4-H Office will develop six educational videotapes plus other materials such as discussion leaders guides and activity papers which can be used by other states to strengthen their advisory council system, said Susannah Densmore, project manager for the Kellogg Grant.

"We think the committee system within our advisory council is where Kentucky 4-H excels," Densmore said. "The tapes will show how to organize the committee system and the roles and functions of each committee."

Not only will the tape tell about Kentucky's volunteers, it also will show them. Volunteers will "star" in the program, she said.

While the tapes will be "exported" to other states to help them develop similar volunteer programs, they will be useful instructional tools for developing new leaders in Kentucky 4-H, Denormne said.

National Science Week May 11-17

Gov. Martha Layne Collins has designated May 11-17 as National Science Week in an effort to increase public awareness and understanding of science and technology.

Gov. Collins said, "The future of our nation depends upon our continuing progress in science and technology. It is particularly important that we provide our children with good scientific education. Even those who do not pursue careers in science should understand the scientific method and appreciate the contributions science and technology make to our way of life."

Gov. Collins also said, "In attracting industry to Kentucky the number one question by major corporations concern our educational system. If Kentucky wants more jobs, we must improve our educational system."

The primary objective of National Science Week is to communicate with today's youth who will be the scientists, researchers, engineers, teachers and citizens tomorrow.

PERGRAM INDICTED BY GRAND JURY

The jury found that on or about the 7th day of April 1986 in Nicholas County, Kentucky, Danny Pergram committed the crime of theft by taking a 1984 Ford pickup truck valued at $100 or more belonging to James H. Pratt, 1989 Moorefield Road, Carlisle."

Trial by jury is set for May 30 at 9 a.m.

Appalachian studies at Berea

Berea College's Appalachian Center has scheduled a summer program in Appalachian literature, resource materials and music, featuring three of the region's most knowledgeable teachers and writers.

The course, designed primarily for teachers who would like to introduce Appalachian Studies or units into their schools, begins June 9 and will continue through June 27 on the Berea campus. Three hours of graduate or undergraduate credit will be available through the University of Kentucky's Off-campus Programs and College of Education.

Noted author and teacher Wilma Dykeman will lecture on the works of the best and most influential writers who have used the Appalachians as a setting.

Dr. Gerald F. Roberts, head of the Weatherford-Hammond Mountain Collection and Southern Appalachian Archives at Berea College, will discuss sources for the study of Appalachian history and culture and will trace the development of Appalachian holdings in the region's libraries.

Folk artist Jean Ritchie will emphasize the main musical traditions of the region—ballads, folk songs and instrumental music—and will discuss their use and meaning.
