NBA draft features Charles Barkley types

NBA draft and things... The NBA college draft is still June 17, but with no Patrick Ewing available this year, most NBA scouts, including much quoted Marty Blake, believe there won't be much difference in who gets the No. 1 or No. 16 picks. Taking a look at the list (see insert), while there doesn't seem to be any legitimate turn-the-franchise-around players, this year's crop has a few good looking prospects and some of them fit into what I call the Charles Barkley category. That is two years and when? Two seasons ago Barkley was a fat rookie who came off the Philadelphia bench to become the league's first team selected by the players. Who are the best prospects among this year's college and high school draftees for extended NBA careers? Here is one man's summary opinion:

- 1. Brad Daugherty, North Carolina... 2. Kenny Walker, Kentucky... 3. William Bedford, Memphis State... 4. John Dawson, Duke... 5. Law Blue, Maryland... 6. Chuck Pivon, Auburn... 7. John Williams, LSU... 8. Brad Sellers, West Virginia... 9. Mark Alarie, Iowa... 10. Mike Taylor, Michigan State...
