Health Tips from Lee Rose

The Product Safety Branch, Division of Radiation and Product Safety, Department for Health Services in Frankfort offers the following for kerosene heater fuel safety.

With cold weather rapidly approaching, many will use kerosene heaters to warm homes, office and work areas. Although these heaters are an excellent source of heat properly and safely operated, these suggestions are to minimize the risk of fire and other hazards from the fuel.

1.—Use only 1-K grade of kerosene—NEVER USE GASOLINE. Small amounts of gasoline or other solvents mixed with kerosene can increase the risk of fire that may engulf the heater and spread to nearby combustible items.

2.—Always store kerosene in a separate container clearly marked "KEROSENE"—not in a gasoline can or a container that has been used for gasoline.

3.—Be particularly careful when purchasing kerosene at service stations to be sure the pump does not contain gasoline. Some service stations have separate islands for kerosene and for gasoline.

4.—Grade 1-K kerosene should be purchased from a dealer that can certify the grade sold is 1-K. Grades other than 1-K contain much more sulfur and will increase sulfur dioxide emissions from heaters resulting in a possible health risk.

5.—Never refuel heater inside of the home or other buildings. Fill tank out-of-doors away from combustible materials, and only after heater has been turned off and has "cooled" down. Do not fill the tank above the full mark. The space above the full mark allows for fuel expansion during operation.

6.—In case of flare-up or if uncontrolled flaming occurs do not attempt to move or carry the heater. If equipped with a manual shut off switch, activate switch. If this does not extinguish the fire, call the fire department after leaving the house or use an appropriate fire extinguisher.

For more information, contact Lee Rose at the Nicholas County Health Center, phone 289-2188.

Beautiful: Tips from the Hart

by Dottie Hart

Dear Hart,
I need help, my feet are cracked, dry, and they aren't just ugly they hurt. Can you give me some of Hart's feet tips? Sue

Dear Sue,
Your feet have virtually no oil glands. You need to use a "greaser" treatment on your feet like you'd use on your face. One of the best, cheapest is plain petroleum jelly. It seals the skin's surface, won't rub off easily, and holds water well. Apply the jelly before going to bed and cover your feet with cotton socks. By morning, you will see a difference.

Dear Hart,
My teeth are a mess. I hate to smile. Please help. Ugly Teeth

Dear Reader,
You didn't give me enough information on your problem. So I will answer several problems.

Could you cultivate a smile that hides your teeth. Some of the top models do this. When you smile never part your lips, or do a beautiful makeup job on your eyes so that they steal the show. Play down your mouth. Use a matt formula lipstick and to brighten dingy teeth wear quiet colors with a hint of blue, such as mauves, fuchsias, reds, and pinks. Avoid corals, peaches, and brown tones, they'll emphasize yellow.

Teeth can be straightened and there are lingual brackets which are applied behind front teeth, the metal doesn't show.

Teeth can be bonded. This will help yellow, gray stained teeth. Bonding can also mend chipped teeth.

If your "problem" is not covered, let me know.

MODEL TIP:
If you shampoo every day, you're probably fighting odor not soil. Oil at the scalp turns rancid. The middle and ends of your hair may be a bit dry. You don't want to scrub too much, one sudsing is plenty for every morning shampoo.

More:
A smile is the easiest, as well as the best facial exercise. A great big smile! Smile at every opportunity and you will look younger, and feel younger.

Please send questions to Beautiful Tips from the Hart, P. O. Box 72297, Louisville, KY 40272.

Eye Openers

DR. ROBERT F. PRETZSCH

DR. DOROTHY THOMPSON

The "Clumsy" Child

Parents often attribute a child's clumsiness to daydreaming, laziness, or just an inborn characteristic. They hope that as the child grows older, this awkwardness will just go away. Sometimes, however, this "clumsiness" is caused by a child's erroneous perception of spatial information. The eyes are sending the brain inaccurate information about where things are located.

Optometrists use lenses and or training to expand, contract, or shift what we see, so that perception of distance, location and the relationship of objects to each other can be improved. When that happens, the "clumsy child" begins to show improvement not only in social settings and at play, but also at school. He or she begins to acquire self-confidence.

This problem is not just limited to children. It may develop as adults grow older, caused by a disorientation to the space around us, especially in a changing environment that is not being perceived accurately. Correcting imperfections in vision enhances the way people function.
