Brownings nominated for award in forestry

The nomination for the 1984 Tom Wallace Farm Forestry Awards are in Mr. and Mrs. John Browning of Carlisle were among several woodland owners nominated in northeast Kentucky.

The Tom Wallace competition, sponsored by the Courier-Journal and the Louisville Times, recognizes farm and woodland owners in Kentucky and western Indiana who practice good forest management on their land.

The Browning's recent forest management activities have included cutting eastern red-cedar for pulpwood and planting three acres of trees. Besides converting low value pastureland to timber, their tree

Contact Lenses Versus Glasses
Some patients see more clearly with contact lenses than they do with glasses. Others do not see as clearly. For most people there is no difference. Everyone sees more NATURALLY with contact lenses, they allow the wearer a wider field of vision. No frame blocks outside or up-and-down fields. Contacts also provide a more normal image size, especially for the very nearsighted and the very farsighted. For patients who have had one contact removed and do not have an implant in that eye, a contact lens is essential to provide binocular vision when the non-operated eye still sees well. People with high amounts of astigmatism sometimes do not see as clearly with soft contact lenses as with glasses. Generally, however, the vision meets acceptable standards for seeing safely and the astigmatic contact lens wearer adjusts well. Those over 40 can see distances clearly with contact lenses, but they may need reading glasses, worn over their contacts, or bifocal contact lenses, to see printed materials.
