Donna Wolf Steigerwald, Chairman of the Board and Chief Executive Officer of Jockey International, Inc. presented the 1987 Distinguished Service Award to James Gaunce of the Carlisle Knitting plant on Saturday, July 25 at the Company's annual family picnic. Other Jockey International, Inc. staff on hand during the presentation included William Steigerwald and Fred Holmes, Vice President Manufacturing from the Kentucky, Wisconsin, Iowa office; Donald Haney, Vice President Kentucky Sewing Operations; and Barry Mademan, Vice President Textile Operations.

The Jockey Distinguished Service Award is the most prestigious award an employee may receive. This award is given in recognition of an individual's significant contribution in perpetuating the Jockey "style" reflecting the best in a person - a commitment to loyalty, integrity and service, and the dedication with which one conducts his daily life with his fellowman. All employees, related and hourly (not including division vice presidents) are eligible for this award. Employees in each location nominated candidates for this year's recipients.

A plaque recognizing the recipient will be placed in a prominent area in each plant location. A personalized certificate is presented to each individual receiving the award. The golden Jockey statue with the individual's name inscribed thereon is also presented along with a check for $500 net to each. An additional contribution from Jockey to the amount of $1000 will also be made to that person's church or favorite charity. A total of ten awards are given each year.

Donny Vire, the Distinguished Service Award recipient of Carlisle Knitting of 1987, has been employed with Jockey for 12 years. He is a dedicated, loyal and skilled machine operator in the knit department. He has earned his follow-up employee respect with his positive, honest and hard working attitude. He is a member of the Mount Zion Methodist Church where he is the superintendent of the Sunday School Program and a substitute teacher of the adult classes. When he is not working at Jockey or doing his part to help his community and church, he is busy tending to the needs of his family and farm.

James Gaunce, the Distinguished Service Award recipient of Knitting of 1987, is very active in the community. He is a member of the Ballou United Methodist Church and a certified Lay Speaker. He regularly brings the comfort of God's word to hundreds of people every week through his radio shows in Oystertown and Versailles. James gives generously of his time to those in need and has made it his duty to bring cheer to the sick. When he is not helping a friend or being the dependable employee for Jockey, he enjoys a relaxing day of fishing.

Both recipients, Vire and Gaunce, truly exhibit the commitment to family, community, church and career which perpetuates the Jockey ideal which certainly qualifies them for the Jockey Distinguished Service Award.

The buck stops with Tapp at the city office

By Martha Madson
Staff Writer

Under the general direction of the Mayor, Tapp serves as city clerk and treasurer for the city of Carlisle, and is responsible for the overall operations of the city office. And that's putting it mildly.

A native of Robertson County, Tapp began working for the city of Carlisle in 1979, during the term of Bill Power.

Two mayors and eight years later, Tapp is proud of the city's financial situation.

"The first year I was here, the city barely had enough money to cover payroll," Tapp explained. "Now we have money in the bank," he added.

Tapp's job description, as established in an ordinance, is lengthy, to say the least.

His responsibilities include preparing the agenda for and attending all regular and special Carlisle City Council meetings; keeping complete and accurate minutes of all meeting proceedings; and recording them in the minutes book, advertising and recording all ordinances and resolutions; serving as personal officer; answering all citizens' inquiries; preparing and mailing tax bills, water bills, notes for occupational license fees, and other fees and assessments; collecting tax bills, water bills, and collecting license fees; selecting, depositing and recording deposits for water customers; serving as payroll clerk; preparing financial report for city council; assisting in preparing annual budget; and the list goes on.

A 1967 graduate of Denning High School, Tapp attended Pagani Business College in Lexington, where she graduated Friday the 13th, September, 1968, with a major in accounting.

The father of a friend from Pagani owned Kentucky Ford Stores in Lexington, where Tapp began working as a data processor during her last quarter at Pagani and her first at Ford.

"I decided to 'go back home' to Lexington, where I began working as a data processor during her last quarter at Pagani and her first at Ford."

While in Lexington, Tapp accepted a position in data processing at Browning Manufacturing in Mayville.

Still in data processing, Tapp began working for the University of Kentucky in the registrar's office, possible in grades to be sent to parents.

"I worked with a woman who had been abused by her husband," Tapp said. "She began trying to push me around, and that's when I decided to quit."

However, as "one of the best operators we've had in a long time," Tapp's superior asked her to reconsider her decision to resign, which she did not do, not wanting to explain her reasons for being dismissed.

After leaving the position at University of Kentucky, Tapp moved on to "Crawford" and Associates, an accounting firm in Lexington.

There, Tapp worked in data processing, collecting water district bills and handling bank statements.

She went on to work for Service in Lexington, working in accounts payable, accounts receivable and bookkeeping.

"This job gave me most of my experience," Tapp said. "I paid the bills for all Long John Silver's Restaurants in Texas and Oklahoma."

Once they learned I could work in data processing, I started having to work weekends to catch them up. That didn't go over well with me," Tapp added.

During her years at Service, Tapp married her husband, Wayne, a Nicholas County native.

When their first child, Jonathan, was 18 months old, Tapp took a break from the working mother scene and stayed home with her son for a year.

Later closing his insurance business, Cooke and his brother-in-law opened Puffy and Cooke Insurance Agency, where Tapp worked until accepting a position at Kentucky Central Insurance.

"They couldn't keep me busy, and that drove me crazy," Tapp said of Kentucky Central.

After living in Lexington since work for Service, Tapp and her family bought a farm in Nicholas County and moved back to Wayne's hometown.

"That's when I decided to try and find something closer to home, and applied for the position of city clerk," Tapp said.

While in high school, Tapp would come to Carlisle to visit and say, "I'll never live in Carlisle."

Not only did she live in Carlisle, but became city clerk for the city government.

Expecting her second child, Gaunce, Tapp resigned Joyce McIntyre as city clerk. Debbie Margaret Wade served as assistant city clerk and Ann Shupe worked as a clerk.

Sharon Faulconer, assistant city clerk for Carlisle, began working for the city of Carlisle through a school program in 1979 and began working on a part-time basis after her graduation in 1979 from Nicholas County High School.

She replaced Sims, with Wade retiring in September, 1986.

Faulconer's job description, also lengthy, includes assessing prop-

MSU is awarded education grant

The Kentucky Department of Education has awarded Morehead State University's Department of English, Foreign Languages and Philosophy a $20,000 grant for the teaching of writing in public schools as part of a state-wide effort.

The grant, which is to be matched by MSU, will assist in an in-service program for 18 student teachers during the 1987-88 academic year.

Dr. Gene Young, associate professor of English and Jay Gooding, Planning County High School, will conduct MSU's program for teachers in attendance and observation jobs as part of a state-wide effort.

According to Young, the new MSU program is affiliated with a national writing project that has been successful since the 1970s.

The program's goal is to have teachers visit successful language arts teachers - look for contact in addition to grammar and punctuation when grading writing assignments.

"An overemphasis on grammar and punctuation in the past discourages students to write," Young said.
