Beautiful: Tips from the Hart

by Betty Hart. In winter if you are plagued by flakes and spots, here's what a doctor had to say. What I needed was a good shampoo. He was not talking about a hair that he meant was a simple cut to keep it through off your shoulders. He said, "I have only hair. Do I still need conditioner?" Betty Hart. Even if you have a terribly oily scalp you still need conditioning. With everything we do to our hair - slow-drying, perming, coloring, exposing it to the sun and pollutants, it needs to be conditioned. You may want to try this beautiful tip: Condition your hair before you shampoo rather than the other way around. Wet your hair, towel it dry, and apply your favorite conditioner. (Adele, take note!) If you are blottering your scalp with a non-dry shampoo, choose one you're drinking coconut oil - a fat that's more saturated than corn, butter, lard or beef tallow. In a survey 21 out of 23 consumers had reported. Coconut may be an even better oil for conditioning than coconut oil. Coconut oil is rich in vitamins and contains about 20 percent of calcium from coconut oil. Coconut has been shown to be healthy. A 20 percent fat diet, slightly less saturated than coconut oil had surprisingly little effect. (Adele, take note!) If you are going to use a creamer use a non-protein creamer, better yet use a protein creamer, better yet use a protein creamer, better yet use a protein creamer.
