GENERAL NEWS

Ford's Footnotes

By Senator Ed Ford

The 1987 session of the Kentucky General Assembly convened at noon, Tuesday, January 6 and adjourned Friday, January 9.

This was the third organizational session of the Kentucky Legislature since the enactment of the 1979 constitutional amendment.

The intent of this constitutional change is to allow the new members of the house and senate to take office in alternate years from adoption of the biennial budget.

This should give the nine new senators and twenty-one house members an opportunity to become familiar with the issues and the budget before they are called upon to vote on a document that will dictate how our tax money will be spent for the next two years.

Upon adjournment of this brief session, we will continue with the interim committees where we will deal with the issues that we expect to come before us in the 1988 regular session.

In actuality, this was the first organizational session where new members of both the House and Senate were seated. In 1981 all house members were elected to three year terms and half of the senate to five year terms.

The senate terms did not expire until the end of 1986.

During the last organizational session there were no newly elected senate members; only those members of the house elected to three year terms in the 1981 election began their term of office in 1985.

The purpose of this abbreviated session is as the name implies, for organizational purposes only.

The constitution is specific in that the session must end in 10 days and no other business may be considered.

As is required, we elected our respective leadership in each house and made committee assignments and appointed committee chairmen.

There was little change in leadership in the senate. Senator Joe Prather did not seek reelection and was replaced as President Pro-Tem by Senator John "Eck" Rose of Clark County.

Senator Rose, former Assistant President Pro-Tem, was replaced by Senator Charles Berger of Harlan.

There were only minor adjustments in committee assignments in order to accommodate our nine freshman members.

I was reassigned to the Agriculture - Natural Resources Committee and to the Education Committee.

I was also reappointed Chairman of the State Government Committee, which is the busiest committee in the senate in the number of bills handled.

All legislation affecting the Executive Branch and all state agencies is handled by this committee. All matters concerning state employees, salaries and pensions are also under our jurisdiction.

During the interim when we are not in session, numerous legislative matters are enacted by the Governor by Executive Order.

Such things as reorganization of the Governor's cabinet and various state agencies are done in this manner.

The law requires that each executive order be adopted in bill form and enacted into the statutes by the next regular session of the legislature, or it ceases to be law.

Normally several hundred such orders are issued between sessions by the Governor.

As we continue during this interim in preparation for 1988, please feel free to contact me on any issue of concern to you. You may contact me by mail at the State Senate, in Frankfort, Ky. 40601, or at my office, Post Office Box 4158, Lexington, Ky., 40544.

Also our toll free message line is still in operation. You may leave a message for me or any other legislator by calling 1-800-372-7181.

Natural gas emergency exists-city industrial users asked to shut down-we buy gas from Columbia Gas Company and are allotted so much for the winter and summer months. We are using much over our quota now, and we have to pay a penalty if we go over and the penalty is a lot of money. The city cannot pay this, so we have to pass it along to our customers. We have to close our industries for a few days. We urge all merchants to cut back your heaters. We urge everyone to save in every possible way.

Spotlighting still illegal

By John Wilson

In spite of a recent ruling that a state statute against "spotlighting" for deer is unconstitutional, the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources is continuing to arrest and prosecute those who engage in this illegal activity, according to Commissioner Don R. McCormick.

The department has appealed to the Supreme Court for a discretionary review of the Kentucky Court of Appeals ruling that its law against "spotlighting" is unconstitutional.

In addition, McCormick said that other existing laws still make "spotlighting" deer or other game illegal and that the state's conservation officers will continue to enforce these laws.

The appeal to the state Supreme Court has been filed through the Attorney General's office, McCormick said.

In late November, the court of appeals struck down a statute which prohibits a person from "casting the rays of a spotlight, jacklight or other artificial lighting device on any highway or in any field, woodland or forest," while having a firearm or other weapon capable of killing a deer in his possession.

In the opinion of the court, the statute is too broad and may be applied to anyone driving a public road with a firearm at hand.

McCormick said that existing laws against molesting wildlife, hunting at night or hunting out of season are being used to combat spotlighters until the appeal is heard.

"There is no way we are going to allow illegal hunters to damage our highly successful deer program," McCormick said.

"Spotlighting" is a favorite technique of illegal deer hunters, who use a powerful spotlight to locate and temporarily blind deer before shooting them.

Deer habitually feed in open fields and along roadsides at night, making them easy prey for poachers.

Over the last 10 years, Kentucky's deer herd has increased greatly in many areas of the state.

GENERAL NEWS

Unemployment rate up

A sharp drop in agricultural jobs at the end of the tobacco harvest season was the biggest contributor to rising jobless rates in 117 Kentucky counties between October and November.

Rates declined in two counties and remained the same in one.

The Nicholas County rate jumped from 6.8 percent to 7.6 percent.

Despite the one-month jump, rates were lower in 87 counties than they were in November 1985, according to figures released today by the Cabinet for Human Resources.

Thirty counties reported higher rates than in November 1985, and three counties reported the same rates.

An estimated 1,381,600 Kentuckians were working in November, down 33,200 form October's state record of 1,414,800, but still 25,100 above the November 1985 figure of 1,356,500.

The local jobless figures mirrored the statewide increase from 6.9 percent in October to 7.8 percent in November. The latest jobless rate remained well below the 9.0 percent recorded in November 1985.

State labor market analyst Ed Blackwell said labor force figures also reflected the traditional increase in applicants for temporary jobs during the holidays.

Carroll County recorded the lowest rate, 2.6 percent, followed by Woodford and Trimble, each with 3.1 percent, Franklin with 4.0 percent, and Fayette, Oldham and Shelby, each with 4.1 percent.

Menifee County's 22.1 percent rate was the highest, followed by Elliott's 20.0 percent, McCreary's 18.1 percent, Carter's 17.4 percent and Bath's 17.1 percent.

There were 56 counties reporting rates of 10.0 percent or higher in November, compared to 37 in October and 74 in November 1985.

"The loss of 14,900 farming jobs had the biggest impact on Kentucky's labor force activity in November," Blackwell said. "And the category that includes domestic workers, self-employed people and unpaid family workers declined by 2,000."

"On the positive side, manufacturing jobs increased by 900, transportation, communications and utilities by 900, trade by 800, education by 600 and services by 300."

The Department for Employment Services monthly survey of non-farm employers also showed losses in bituminous coal mining (300), construction (100), and finance, insurance and real estate (100).

The estimate of jobless Kentuckians rose from 119,700 in October to 135,400 in November but remained below the November 1985 level of 153,400.

The state's civilian labor force estimate was 1,717,000 in November, 17,300 below the October report of 1,734,500, but above the November 1985 figure of 1,709,900.

The civilian labor force includes non-military people who are working and unemployed people who actively are seeking jobs. It does not include anyone who is jobless but not seeking work.

Unemployment statistics are based on estimates and, therefore, are compiled to measure employment trends rather than to actually count people working.

BLUEGRASS AREA DEVELOPMENT DISTRICT

Joblessness in the Bluegrass district increased from a revised rate of 5.0 percent in October to a preliminary rate of 5.8 percent in November. Rates ranged from Woodford County's 3.1 percent to Powell County's 15.6 percent, as four of the district's counties reported rates above 10.0 percent.

The monthly sample of claimants of unemployment insurance benefits showed 44.5 percent had worked in manufacturing, 18.4 percent in trade, 15.6 percent in services and 12.4 percent in construction.

Prices down

Prices received by Kentucky farmers at mid-December were mixed with hogs and corn prices down, while beef, calf, wheat and soybean prices were higher, according to the Kentucky Agricultural Statistics Service.

The hog price of $50.70 at mid-December was down from the November price of $52.50, but still higher than the December 1985 price of $46.90.

Prices fell for barrows and gilts and sows. Beef cattle increased to $62.87 at mid-December from a $45.40 average in November.

This increased to $45.80 for the reporting period from a $45.40 average in November.
