 month to clean the firehouse, review equipment, or maybe take a refresher course on the operation of the Jaws of Life.
 During 1986, the fire department and rescue squad responded to 103 calls.
 Eleven of those were drownings or automobile accidents, with the remaining 92 calls for fire.
 "It is a tough job," Hughes said of his position as chief of the fire department and fire squad.
 "I can't leave town unless I have one of my assistants on call."
 According to Hughes, there are more areas here to be investigated now than ever before.
 Ronnie West, the arson investigator for the Kentucky State Department at Dry Ridge, works with Hughes during these investigations.

 In the case of drownings, the Kentucky State Police post in Morehead sends an investigator to work with Hughes.
 Hughes talked about his department's relationship with Nicholas County ambulance service operator Ronald McWhorter.
 "If there is more than one person involved in an accident, we will help Ronnie transport the victims to the hospital."
 "We all get along real well, and I think that is important," Hughes added.
 Other members of the Nicholas County Fire Department and Rescue Squad are John Ring, Phil

 Mitchell, Doug Garrett, Jeff Hoop, Tony Fryman, Calvin
 Dartin, Sam Reynolds, Oliver
 Voss, Steve Vance, Mark Hughes
 (another brother), and Eddie Earlowine, who is also Hughes' daytime assistant.
 "I think we have a very good system," Hughes said of the MCF-DRS.
 "We get a lot of criticism, but we get our men out as quickly as possible."

INCREASE YOUR FARM INCOME

Seaboard Farms, one of the 10 largest poultry producers in the nation, is currently surveying the central Kentucky area as a possible site to establish a Broiler Complex. The complex would consist of a processing plant, hatchery and feed mill.

The Broiler Processing Plant would employ over 500 local personnel and would require 150-200 local contract broiler producers.

Seaboard Farms currently employs over 3000 people and has contracts with over 1000 contract farmers in Tennessee and Georgia.

If you own a farm in the central Kentucky area, are willing to invest and gross $50,000 annually, contact Seaboard Farms at 606-744-75 contact your local county agent for further information.

Contract farms are responsible for financing the poultry house, manpower and utilities.
