That would probably do it . . . Macbeth could kill the king by attacking his manhood

A teacher at St. Paul's Preparatory School in Concord, N. H., Richard Lederer, has an interesting hobby. He collects student reporters, made by his own students mostly collected from other teachers across the country.

What you believe that the Greek epic poet, Homer, wrote, "The Odyssey"? What about "The Iliad"? He collects student reporters, made by his own students mostly collected from other teachers across the country.

The author of "The Iliad" and "The Odyssey" is Homer. He collected student reporters, made by his own students mostly collected from other teachers across the country.

You have to admit all this fractured history is a lot more interesting than what we have been taught. And probably just as accurate.

The first monthly periodical, and probably just of 1987 has been redesigned so that it can be filled out by a 6-year-old kid with a tulip pen in hand in a matter of minutes—unlike the 1985 version.

—What's been your earliest nightmare this month? (I retired the World's Fun cartoon magazine student biographies.
