Tax discussion draws large crowd

By Benny Fast

Nicholas County Fiscal Court, in regular session last Wednesday evening, began discussion for a decision on a proposed payroll tax ordinance for Nicholas County.

Magistrate Floyd Russell said the city clerk does the whole job in Hopkins.

Business makes less than $20,000 per year they would be taxed according to 1 percent of profits.

Several others agreed with the sentiment, making the point if farmers do not make a profit, they would not have to pay payroll tax.

Hospital payments explained to court

By Benny Fast

Shortly after 4:30 p.m. last Wednesday, people began to gather in the courtroom for the purpose of regular scheduled meeting of Nicholas County Fiscal Court.

At that special meeting, a question was raised concerning the nursing home's agreement with Nicholas County, which required monthly payments of $100, which are to be placed in the sinking fund.

Hester, "We figured if you can give a 10 percent raise, you can pay, you can pay."

Council says no to payroll tax

By Janis M. Duncan

Carlsle City Council members voted five to one Monday night during regular session to repeal all city business license taxes, and refund money to those persons who have paid taxes.

They also said the $100,000 tax was what they wanted, Tyler said. We're still talking about a $25 flat fee.

Project Graduation growing by leaps and bounds

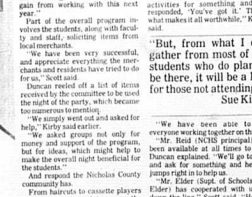

By Hank Bond

Project Graduation means more to many students at Nicholas County High School, than a party after graduation in late May.

Invites... that plan to have a keg party or something else... but from what I can gather from most of the delegates...

Good idea, Scott said. I think it's great to have something to keep everyone together... we had time.

When we went to Mr. Elder and asked about going to the Park YMCA for a couple hours to swim that evening...
